Mothers' Day

By Rev. George G. Elder

By REV. GEORGE G. ELDER

The time has come when Mothers' Day should mean something more than a beautiful sentiment. We, who in the past, have worn the white flower in memory of the mothers who are no longer with us, should, today, think of the mothers all over the world who are wearing the red flower of courage, and have bravely given their sons "that democracy may not perish from the earth."

If the mothers of the world were gathered together on this Mothers' Day, the dark-skinned mother of India would not understand the speech of the English or American mothers, but their hearts would be united in the same prayer.

The mother of yesterday was a woman who loved her Bible and knew how to pray; a man with a praying mother carries ever with him an invisible shield which will protect him in the hour of temptation and stand as a wall between him and cowardice, the mother of today should leave her children the same heritage. These are the days when thrilling stories of the Bible should be told to little children, so that they may realize that the hand of God is over men. There is no holier altar in the world than a mother's knee. Prayers learned at that altar will never fade from the mind and soul. On this Mothers' Day may we not hope that the mothers of America will determine to make prayer a vital part of their lives and the lives of their children.
