Women of Good Government Pass Resolutions; Urge Platform Study

Mrs. George Holmes, newly elected president of Women for Good Government, held her first executive board meeting at the Rollling Hills home of Mrs. R. F. Beck. In attendance were the officers who had been installed at the June luncheon in Long Beach and committee chairmen chosen by the new president to serve during the coming year. These included Mmes. Gladys Soule, secretary; R. F. Beck, vice president and program chairman; Robert Rosevear, treasurer and committee chairmen: Mr. LeRoy Davis and Mr. Oscar DeJeerf, legislative; Mr. Charles Shute, hospitality; Mr. Ray Beardslee, Bulletin; Mr. Dana Morrison, education, and Mr. Clyde Haslet, press.

The Board's first official business was the drafting of a resolution to be forwarded to the State Board of Education commending their action of placing more stress on the subjects of history, geography and civics in the public schools of California. Incorporated in the resolution was the group's desire to have these subjects taught under the specialized titles rather than lumped into one subject under the misleading, general title of "social studies."

Another resolution was sent to Congressman Edgar Hiestand congratulating him on the appointment of Mrs. Edith Stafford who attended the 1960 White House Conference on Youth as a delegate from the Congressman's district. Many of the new board had heard Mrs. Stafford's report on this conference. Feeling it such a tremendous value to all parents and taxpayers, the Board urged that persons, such as Mrs. Stafford, an expert in the field of educational policies, be given appointments in the future to any local, state or federal conferences held for the purposes of developing new policies to be followed pertaining to the field of education. Mrs. Stafford is past president of the Los Angeles Board of Education.

Mrs. Holmes requested members of the Board and the general membership to pay particular attention to the platforms of the national political parties meeting in convention. She claimed these would set the pace for government after the November election.

"All citizens who desire to become informed as to which candidate is best suited to occupy the White House for the next four years," claimed Mrs. Holmes, "should evaluate the platforms upon which both Democratic and Republican candidates must run. Too many people can be fooled by a charming personality and smiling face. Past voting records, associations, speeches, etc. can give anyone a fair idea of the kind of promises the candidate will carry out in the event he is elected to office. Our country needs to return to the solid principles of government enumerated in the Constitution and an adherence to the moral code of the Bible if America is to protect her Christian Republic."

Programs and speakers discussed for the coming year included: Mrs. Florence Lyons, United Nations; Dr. William Lawlor, education; Donald Cortum, decent literature; and a report from the 1960 White House Conference on Youth by Edith Stafford.

Approval of a tentative swimming party to be held during the summer months and a fall dinner were also included on the agenda.

The organization meets at 10 a.m. in the San Pedro Assistance League, 1441 8th St., San Pedro on the fourth Wednesday of the month. Plans for the fall sessions included the addition of an informal discussion program to be held following the regular meeting each month.

Terry, president of the Torrance Council PTA and council members at a special meeting Thursday at the YWCA. The council voted unanimously to endorse the tax which will appear on the Oct. 11 ballot.

Torrance PTA Council Endorses Override Tax

"The override tax is for the kids, and not anyone else," said Superintendent of Schools Dr. J. H. Hull, to members of the Torrance Council of Parent Teacher Association at a special Council meeting held last Thursday at the Torrance YWCA. Following Dr. Hull's presentation, members of the Council voted unanimously to endorse the school override tax which comes before the Torrance voters on Oct. 11.

Mrs. Vernon Terry, Council president, appointed Mrs. William Poser, Council Junior past president, as chairman of an Override Tax Committee which will coordinate the distribution of information and materials to parents. Others serving on this committee are: Mrs. Otto Willett, Mrs. Russell Badrick, Mrs. Kenneth McVey, Mrs. R. C. Williams, and Mrs. Mark Wright.
