FOR THE GOOD OF ALL
(An editorial by one of our readers.)

Disraeli, the master mind of European diplomacy prior to Gladstone, said, "I have brought myself by long meditation to the conviction that a human being with a settled purpose must accomplish it, and that nothing can resist a will which will stake even existence upon its fulfillment."

That the truth of this statement has been borne out in the lives and achievements of many persons, the names of whom are familiar to all, will be readily admitted.

Then, if one mind of a settled purpose shall prove irresistible to all obstacles, how fruitful of accomplishment must be the union of many minds toward the same purpose.

Here in Torrance we have provided for us many desirable things. Pleasant, comfortable, cheery homes; well planned streets and gardens; modern improvements. But there is one important, indispensable feature yet to be secured. A feature which is necessary for the perfect success of the community. A feature which no architect or engineer can plan for us, but one which we can of our own efforts bring into being.

The feature of community interest, of unity of thought and action.

Too many of us are prone to let our interest in the real civic development be of a passive nature. We are content to sit back and take any developments as a matter of course, which are to be expected, giving no thought to our personal interest and advantage in the growth of any idea which shall be for the growth of our city.

And this is due to the fact that we have been very backward in the main in building a social interest among ourselves.

We should always bear in mind that Torrance in OUR CITY. It is not a place wherein to live for a short time and then make a move to some more agreeable locality, but one which, by our own united efforts can be made to embody every meaning of the word "home."

We are pioneers, the persons who should do things, the ones who should make this a place more attractive for ourselves and families than any other place in the world. And we can do these things if we will but develop the personal feeling of interest in the welfare of each other and the city to a greater degree than at present exists.

We have been given a splendid base from which to work and should make greater progress in a short time than would have been possible under other conditions. Yet many of us are not making the slightest effort toward taking advantage of our privileges.

There are a few men in Torrance who realize these things and are unselfishly striving for the good of all. They are working hard toward the accomplishment of desirable additions and improvements which will benefit YOU.

Your encouragement and assistance would help these few to bring about greater developments. It is an uphill drag when a few men have to pull the whole town after them.

Mrs. Torrance Citizen, it is largely "up to you" to help in these matters. Get acquainted with the rest of the folks in town and as you get to know them you will find many thoughts which you have in common. And get after Mr. T. C., insist upon him taking an active interest in the affairs of the community. He has ideas and thoughts which will be of interest and value in our development. But those thoughts and ideas will never bear fruit unless they are known and mixed with the ideas and thoughts of other citizens.

Let us all work together for a greater interest all around. Let us know each other intimately and personally, let us develop a friendship which shall mean more than a nod in passing.

When we have done these things, then shall we forget to say that we live in Torrance. For then we will feel that WE ARE TORRANCE.

VEGETABLES LOWER MEAT BILL

Prepare Only What is Required for One Meal.

The high cost of living can only be reduced by the co-operation of all of the heads of the household," a woman writes in the Dallas News. "It is impossible for one member of the family alone to accomplish anything if the entire adult membership does not work in unison."

"Live simply. Use fresh food, but buy only what is needed at one time. Go to the best and cheapest marketman or grocer. Use in hash, croquettes or soups the leftover pieces of meat, or if you can buy cheaper cuts they can be utilized in that way and make the meal so much more palatable."

"The soup beans, when cooked properly, are good and as a rule are cheap. Cook them as soup and they are not only nutritious, but can be baked, not as the Boston baked beans, if you are hurried, for they are baked without boiling and take more time. Simply use the boiled beans, putting them in a baking dish, or pan, with a small quantity of molasses. They are quite appetizing and are very cheap. Hominy goes a long way also for a money expended."

"You will find that by providing vegetables your meat bill will be greatly reduced, thereby cheapening the meal. I have a friend who never does her marketing until the last minute. The farmers at their wagons want to leave and sell much cheaper. She does not get the choice selections, but she always has delicious things to eat, because she knows how to select, prepare and make appetizing the things she buys, even if they are not always the best."

"One thing should not be forgotten, and that is not to prepare a greater quantity of food than is essential for the meal, unless it can be utilized for the next meal. For my own family of five I try to prepare just what they will consume at each meal, as none of them like things warmed over, and very few things prepared in the usual way simply to save."

"Potatoes cooked for dinner and left over are delicious fried in patties. They also make a very palatable salad. The bread left over makes very good cakes for breakfast, and if you wish to indulge in the luxury of desserts, makes a very good pudding for dinner especially if raisins are used, or if dried and rolled, makes crumbs to be used for your croquettes, thickening soups, hamburger steaks, etc."

Going After World Trade

The movement on the part of 60 manufacturing plants of this country to go after foreign trade by getting into actual touch with the consumer all over the world is a big step in the right direction. Representatives of these establishments are to carry sample goods with them on a two-year trip, to include South Africa, India, the Straits settlements, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, China, Japan, Hawaii, Central America and the countries of South America. It is expected that those who take part in this world tour for the expansion of our trade will do more than sell goods. A principal part of their duty will be to study local conditions and talk with dealers who know the native trade. If the goods shown are not the kind wanted, it will be the business of the representatives to find out just what is needed. The great expansion of German exports has been in part due to the tactful way in which manufacturers of that country have catered to the special tastes of customers in various parts of the globe. American goods are making their way because they are the best and they have ever been, systematically pushed in foreign countries. This move is one that has long been needed. It should be the beginning of an era of expansion in foreign trade such as this nation has not yet known. In connection with this awakening on the part of manufacturers may be mentioned the announcement that several lines are preparing to build fleets of vessels for coast trade to be used after the Panama Canal is in operation. It would be a fitting opening of the great canal if that event were to inaugurate the new birth of a navy of peace destined to carry our own goods in ships flying the Stars and Stripes.—Denver Republican.
