I Tel-You

By Mike Gardner

The TV image makers have had their ears boxed for showing too much video violence by PTA groups, educators, civic leaders and sundry elements striving for improvement in TV fare.

But Madison Avenue, the networks and sponsors really have no worry. If an actor in a TV play shoots 22 guys, clobbers his wife, pulls the ears off his maiden aunt and puts his mother-in-law in a jar of pickle juice, that's just make believe evidence of what people do to other people. If you read your newspaper, it's not make believe. It's for real.

The greatest menace in TV is the erroneous information and unreal education they give you about what's going on inside yourself.

For instance, take the TV commercial. That's what they want you to watch. And viewers do. In shuddering horror.

There's one in which they let a headache pill slide down a glass blower's nightmare idea of what a stomach looks like. The pill goes down and around and around and comes out where? Almost like the old son says. But this diagramatic dirge is no music to the ear.

They tell you that the corpuscles of your blood stream gorge on the questionable remedial contents of this powdery pellet which doesn't even have a sugar coating. And they show how it propels through your intestinal trace which is so twisted around and messed up that it makes one of Rube Goldberg's cartoon inventions as simple as a dangling wet string of spaghetti.

It's so bad that your headache is joined by the galloping wallops in the abdominal region symptomatic of a full-blown stomach ache.

Then there's the one where they show that your head is full of trip hammers, Chinese gongs and gigantic punch presses. It's enough to make you blow your head off with a migraine cannon.

Then there's the one where they show you a statue with parastic armpit aroma. The announcer comes on with a voice like Boris Karloff telling Peter Lorre what's hidden in the garbage can that hasn't had the cover off for umpty-nine years. And he has the audacity to imply that the marble statues are only a perspiration-free example of what you smell like to other people.

It's enough to make a parent completely non-plussed for an answer when he puts his little ones to beddy-bye and they ask: "What are little boys and girls made of?"

Then the parent goes beddy-bye and lies there believing it may be his last night on earth while his heart goes bluh-bluh, bluh-bluH, blUH, blUH, bLUH-bLUH, BLUH-BLUH.

Like the one in the TV commercial.
