May Company to Install Computerized Accounting

Southern California shoppers will take a direct hand in stocking department stores under a new retail management system.

The plan, to be used by the May Company of California, Southern California's largest department store group, has been named CLASS, for Closed Loop Accounting for Store Sales.

"As the name 'Closed Loop' implies, the CLASS system is designed to respond automatically to consumer purchases," explained May Company President Geoffrey Swaebe, who made the announcement in New York City at a meeting of the National Retail Merchants Association.

• • •

"COMPLETE information on every sale will be captured on new-type sales registers ni a form which can be read by our NCR computers. As customers buy the goods from us we automatically tally their purchases and generate orders to suppliers which guarantee that stocks on our shelves will match the buying tastes of Southern Californians," Swaebe continued.

The May Company will launch the CLASS program in February with the opening of a new store in Costa Mesa. The firm will install its first computer for the CLASS program in April. By the end of 1966 six other Southland stores will be affected. These will be the outlets at West Los Angeles, Whittier, Buena Park, San Bernardino, Topanga Plaza and Arcadia.

• • •

SWAEBE EXPLAINED that the CLASS system resulted from an all-out study launched in March, 1965. He said the May Company had invited seven manufacturers of computers and allied equipment to work on the program. The system to be used is the one proposed by the National Cash Register Company. The computers to be used by the May Company will be manufactured in the NCR Electronics Division plant at Hawthorne.

The CLASS system has been made possible by a series of recent technical innovations in sales registers and computer equipment which is currently in production and has been proven in actual use.

The May Company will be the first large-scale user on the West Coast of the new NCR Class 53 registers. These units are designed especially for central computerized accounting of decentralized store operations. They provide two complete journal, or audit, tapes of all sales rung up on the store registers. In this way, one complete list of transactions can be kept in the store for manual auditing while the other is dispatched to the store's computer center in downtown Los Angeles.

• • •

UNDER THE CLASS system, the register tapes sent downtown will be read directly into the computer system, instead of requiring the punching of tabulating cards as older methods have done. This will be accomplished through the use of a special type font on the sales registers which can be read by both people and the computer.

The CLASS system will use a National Cash Register 315 RMC computer, the first commercial system to utilize advanced, thin-film memories. This computer has the capabilitiy of performing arithmetic jobs in billionths of a second.

"With this approach," Swaebe explained, "the sales information used to manage be—literally—many millions our stores will be more current. This means that we will of dollars closer to the realities of consumer buying."

• • •

SWAEBE INDICATED that the new sales accounting program was sparked by a growth campaign aimed at helping the May Company keep pace with the Southland.

"When you talk about growth in Southern California, it begins to sound like an old story these days," the May Company president said. "But as far as we are concerned the growth pattern is more critical today than it has ever been. During 1966, we look for the biggest growth year we have ever enjoyed in Southern California. We're scheduled to open three stores and add 700,000 square feet of selling space. This is faster than we've ever moved."
