

CALIFORNIA

I stood upon a wind-swept height
And gazed in rapture, breathlessly,
Knowing God gave my eyes their sight,
That I might all thy grandeur see,
Wonderful California.

The velvet hills spread far below—
The valleys with their carpets green;
The sunset over peaks aglow;
And all the purple shades between,
Thine, oh, California!

A breath of pines was on the air,
And scent of flowers, wild and sweet
The breezes, 'mid the blossoms there,
Untiring their glad song repeat—
Singing "California!"

I live to love thee more and more—
Thy music hear, thy beauties see;
From snow-crowned peak to wave-
kissed shore,
A Paradise are thou to me—
Oh, my California!
