

all were thankful that a band of employees was able to add their tribute to the man they loved so well.

The management of the Union Tool Company have planned a program which has long been in operation—one of the most remarkable in the world. Here is a brief summary: The company has appropriated $500 for equipment for a baseball team and Mr. W. H. Sparling is now engaged in its organization. There are four professional ball players who are now employees who will at once become members and about an equal number of other professionals are in prospect from the Columbus; the three I's, and the Portland, Ore., circuit. There will be some of the famous Giants as members and one member, on the office force of the Union Company, who escaped death in the recent bomb explosion in Wall street, he having been associated with one of the big banking institutions there at the time of the carnage. Players Beck and Wyckoff of Gardena will be included in the club, which will commence operations in about ten days.

Another of the methods inaugurated by the Union Tool Company for the benefit of the employes is religious services every Monday noon and a concert by the Union Band every Wednesday noon. The loyalty of the men to the great institution can be surmised when the secret of the management is here given.

The whole force of the Union Tool Company were unable to attend the dedication services. There were about 500 in the foundry department who could not leave their molds without the loss of several thousand dollars to the company. They stood by their guns though their hearts were with the great cause.

Many were the expressions of admiration for the address by Mr. Partridge, the well chosen language placed him as an orator; one who can move the hearts of the hearers. That is the only test of oratory.
