JOSEPH J. GREENE
. . . In New Role

Veteran Showman Takes Over Harbor Drive-In

A veteran of four Broadway performances who has played the nation's theater stages from coast to coast before settling down to a motion picture career 10 years ago has recently started a new role in Torrance.

The showman, Joseph J. Greene, has taken over the Harbor Drive-In Theater at 23444 South Vermont avenue. The role of theater operator is not a new one to Greene—he has operated theaters all over the country, and at one time owned and operated the Raymond Theater in Pasadena.

Greene started his motion picture career in 1940 and has appeared in 68 pictures since that time.

He was Chief Justice White of the U. S. Supreme Court in the technicolor production of "Wilson" and a butcher in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn."

NO LIMIT

There is apparently no limit to the range of pictures which have needed the talents of the portly Mr. Greene. He appeared with Dan Daily and Betty Grable in "Mother Wore Tights," and portrayed the sheriff in a Hopalong Cassidy thriller named "The Devil's Playground."

He may now be seen in such first run movies as "The Hoodlum," with Lawrence Tierney, and may soon be seen with Slapsy Maxie Rosenbloom and Max Baer in "Skipalong Rosenbloom."

FINISHED RECENTLY

His latest film, "A Long Night," with John Barrymore Jr., was finished only a week ago.

Besides his stage and movie appearances, Greene has been active on the television networks. Among his TV credits are the Alan Young Show, the prosecutor on "Wild Bill Hickock" series, and the latest "Boston Blackie" series.

Greene is the originator and copyright owner of the Greene Buck Auction, which he plans to inaugurate at the Harbor Drive-In Theater in the near future. He has stated his wish to give the public a well-balanced program at the theater by giving it what it wants.
