Meat, Produce Increases Cause Rise in Food Price

By REYNOLDS KNIGHT

Do you have the feeling that you've been paying more for food lately? Well, you have. Prices did go up in July, but all the experts say it can't be blamed on inflation. The cause is simply the time of year, summer, when prices for some foods usually go up.

Leading the July rise in food prices were meat, fresh fruit and vegetables. In some quarters it was pointed out, though, that the July rise in meat prices was not a reflection of current attempts by Western farmers to hold cattle off the market for better prices at the stockyards. There has not been enough time for prices to reflect the farmers' action.

The latest increase, in July, of 0.3 per cent in food prices lifted the cost-of-living index to a level 1.1 per cent higher than at the same time in 1963. Some encouragement is to be found, too, in the fact that the index has gone up only 4.4 per cent in the past 3½ years.

RAILROAD CARBUILDING Centennial — Because wood was plentiful around Milton, Pa., and the first oil wells were drilled near there, a railroad car-building firm set up its business there in 1864, to make wooden-tub tank cars. Although it's 100 years later and wood has long since been replaced by steel, tank cars in great variety still are the principal product of this long-lived plant.

That first company—Murray, Dougal & Co.—was combined with 12 other firms in 1899 into one concern, then called American car & Foundry Co. but now known as ACF Industries, Inc.

As carbuilding technology improves, more varieties of lading are carried, leading to the development of more types of special-purpose cars. In fact, ACF Industries executives feel that "75 per cent of all tank cars that will be delivered in 1974, 10 years from today, have not yet been designed."

Changes in raw materials are not the only differences noted in 100 years. In the early days a hardy breed of men known as "car knockers" made cars "guaranteed not to break," but today brute force has been replaced by advanced design, engineering concepts and manufacturing techniques.

IN THE Customer's Shoes—It seems to be a fact in the business life that during slow periods or downright bad times, businessmen treat their customers with great respect and consideration, but when times are good and the orders are flowing in, many of those same customers find themselves taken for granted.

One automatic controls firm has decided to buck the trend. The management of Honeywell Inc. says it is enjoying good business just like everybody else but is concerned whether all the benefits of the current good times are getting back to the customer. The firm has opened what it calls a "customers shoes" campaign in which all employees have been asked to put themselves in the customer's shoes—giving the customer the same product of quality, the same prompt delivery and service they'd want if they were in the customer's shoes.

"Customer's shoes" is the golden rule in modern business dress.

SCIENCE IN THE NEWS—Some day the energy of the ocean waves may produce electricity, wind clocks, transmit electronic signals. The possibility lies in an "ocean motion harness" designed to put the sea's energy to work. Developers also say the device can be used in any situation where random motion is normally present, as in an automobile. . .Miniaturization has been a keystone to successful exploration of outer space and now the laser, a powerful light beam, has been put to use in boring "miniature" holes, so small they are invisible to the naked eye. . .Growing western demands for power may be met by a "big brother" of the fragile vacuum tubes in TV and hi-fi sets. Ten-foot-high steel cylinders, called mercury arc valves, are being considered by the Interior Department for carrying 750,900 volts from the Pacific Northwest to California and Arizona.

• • •

THINGS TO COME—New uses for coal is the watchword in the industry today and one firm of jewelry makers has risen to challenge with highly polished pendants of coal, hung from gold-anodized aluminum neck chains. The shapes are round, diamond or heart. . .Good news for smokers-in-bed: a flame-proof mattress ticking has been developed, chiefly for sale to hotels and motels. . .Stalled motorists can have greater protection through use of a new emergency flasher that creates a zone of light all around the car by flashing rear and forward directional signals. It installs on instrument panel. . .New transparent adhesive patching material makes possible repair of plastic swimming pools without draining. . .Easy Life Department: new foot rest adjusts to nine positions to comfort feet and legs; it's said to fit all chairs, even rockers.

• • •

BITS O' BUSINESS—With steel production increases and prospects bright for the rest of 1964, the industry is beginning to note some stockpiling against a possible strike next spring. . .Commerce Department reports rising imports in July. . .The United States' gold supply rose $3 million in July, to $15.462 billion. . .Hurricane Cleo cost insurance companies $65 million for property damage, exclusive of autos and boats.
