CHILDREN'S CORNER

FATHER'S STRANGE PRISON

It was moving day. Our new home was in the country, where we could have plenty of fresh air and sunshine, chickens to lay fresh eggs for us every day, and a cow to supply us with good, rich milk.

Of course, there was a great deal of work to be done after we reached the house, because all the furniture had to be arranged. The first thing we needed was our dining table and dishes, so that we could have some lunch, and the next, was to have our beds set up, so that we could have good places to sleep at night after our hard day's work.

Everyone was busy trying to help, even the little children; and if the smallest ones could not help much, they could watch while the others worked. That was more fun than any game they could think of.

All the beds had been set up in the first and second floors, and there was still one more bed; should we put two in one room, or would it be better to have someone sleep in the attic?

The boys said they would love to have the attic for their room, so they and father started carrying a big bed up the stairs. But the stairs were narrow, and the bed was wide, and they had to do a great deal of pushing and pulling, but at last they were half way to the top.

Then Father and the boys stopped to rest, and wipe the perspiration from their faces. Now they started to push and pull again, but the bed would not move. Of course, they kept on trying for a good while because there was Father on the other side of the bed, and he did not want to be imprisoned in the attic all the time we were going to live there. And we didn't want him to have to stay there.

We had no ladder long enough to put up to the attic window, but we had a saw, and Big Brother ran down stairs to find that. Then he came back, and commenced sawing pieces off of the bed. A piece was sawed off the top, and one off each leg, and then the bed went up the stairs as fast as could be, and Father came down.

RECALLS HER KID DAYS

The pianist who used to beat out rhythmic measures in time with the action of motion picture scenes when "Fascination" was screened at Mae Murray's Tiffany Studios, New York, started playing "The Sidewalks of New York." Miss Murray, in the Spanish costume she wears in the picture, cried out, "Stop it! Stop it at once!" Then explained:

"Whenever they play that tune, I feel like taking off my shoes and stockings and dancing, as I used to do when I was a kid here in New York. Whenever I'd hear a hurdy-gurdy, I'd run after it and dance as the music was cranked out. I simply had to dance when the music started."

Miss Murray stars in her latest Metro release, "Fascination," which comes to the Torrance Theatre Sunday and Monday, November 19 and 20.

"St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappears and cannot burn the skin.

Don't suffer! Relief awaits you. "St. Jacobs Oil" has relieved millions of rheumatism sufferers in the last half century, and is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains.
