began raising chickens. When he had some hatched out he soon noticed that they were languishing in their coops and apparently about to die. He consulted a neighbor.

"What do you feed them?" asked the neighbor.
 "Feed them!" exclaimed the novelist. "Why, I don't feed them anything!"

"Then how do you suppose they are going to live?"
 "I presumed," said the novelist, with dignity, "that the old hens had milk enough for them now."

HE MUFFED IT ALL

A New Yorker, touring in Egypt, spent most of two days visiting the three most remarkable tombs in the Valley of the Kings. He wandered in and out, regarding the splendors of the mural decorations and the gaudy mortuary upholstery displayed on every side.

"What do you think of it all?" he was asked.
 He drew a long breath. "I'll say those old Pharaohs knew how to live," he replied.

STORIES

IN HER FAVOR

The only son had just announced his engagement, to his family.
 "What? That girl! She squints!" remarked his mother.
 "She has absolutely no style," added his sister.
 "Red-headed, isn't she?" queried his aunt.

"She's fitgety," said Grandma.
 "She hasn't any money," put in his uncle.
 "She doesn't look strong!" exclaimed his first cousin.
 "She's stuck up!" asserted his second cousin.

"She's an extravagant thing!" interposed his third cousin.
 "Well, she has one redeeming feature," said the son thoughtfully.
 "And what's that?" asked the family in chorus.
 "She hasn't any relations," was the quiet reply.

MILK-FED

A certain novelist, with a love for the simple life, moved to a farm and tor's introduction of extreme ritual into the service.

 Mr. Smith was aggressively on the reverse, and on one occasion their difference of opinion cropped out in a lively through brief dialogue.
 Mr. Smith, having exhausted his arguments on his unresponsive brother warden, said:
 "At least you will own that art is the handmaiden of religion."
 "Yes," returned Jones, savagely, "and I wish religion would give her a month's notice!"

think, children," she added; "Isn't that wonderful?"
 The "smart boy" in the class did not seem impressed. "Yes, miss," he piped up. "And if he had been sitting in school looking at his books he wouldn't have discovered anything."

ON WITH THE DANCE
 In former times, when royalties were more important, a lady at a court ball was intensely gratified when a prince selected her as a partner. She was almost overwhelmed with pride when he danced a second measure with her.
 "Oh," she gushed, as she reposed blissfully in his arms, "your highness does me too great honor."
 The candid prince answered coldly: "But no, madam. Merely, my physician has directed me to perspire."

A HORSE A PIECE
 "Would you like a lock of my hair?" asked the gallant old bachelor of the spinster who had been a belle a few decades past.
 "Why don't you offer me the whole wig?" the maiden giped, with a titter.
 The bachelor retorted with icy disdain:
 "You are very biting, madam, considering that your teeth are porcelain."

THE BOY WINS
 The teacher was trying to impress on the children how important had been the discovery of the law of gravitation.
 "Sir Isaac Newton was sitting on the ground and looking at the tree. An apple fell on his head, and from that he discovered gravitation. Just
