Campaign Is Making Headway

of men in Southern California. Personally I think that a university should not be nearer than twenty-five or thirty miles from a large city. It is greatly to the disadvantage of the institution to have any considerable number of the students living in the city away from the campus and away from co-operation and knowledge of their fellows. At Berkeley there is comparatively very little esprit de corps except on football occasions. It is a great improvement where the students know one another and know as many members of the faculty as are connected with their work.
Personally I would think it wise to put the University near Santa Monica or Redondo, or on the hills behind. The present location is far too small for the future and far too near the center of matters disconnected with the University.
Very truly yours,
(Signed)
DAVID STARR JORDAN.

Local Orchestra Enjoys Concert

Miss Lyle Louise Soddy of 931-B Sierra, instructor of the Torrance school orchestra and member of the music and orchestra department of the Los Angeles school district, took ten members of the Torrance school orchestra to a concert by the Philharmonic orchestra at Philharmonic auditorium on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Sapp, Mrs. Mowry and Mrs. Cogswell furnished transportation for the party.
The wonderful program was greatly enjoyed. Before each number the history and any story attached to it was given. Each kind of instrument was played separately and the children asked to guess the kind of instrument. The pupils were the guests of Miss Soddy.

OBSERVATIONS

development in a territory struggling under such a disadvantage. The cost of the sewer system is comparatively small. The bonds will run for 40 years. As the assessed valuation of the district increases the cost per year to each property-owner will decrease. And last of all—no district is any larger than its facilities for sanitation. * * * * *

It is evident that a great many persons holding offices in many of the states of the union are dead set against placing another inhibition in the Constitution. Thirteen states have defeated the child labor amendment.

Most of the opponents of the amendments have declared that they are not against regulation of child labor, but are firm in the conviction that such regulation can be handled more effectively by individual states—than by the national government.

The failure of the federal government to enforce prohibition is pointed to as proof that the country is too large to permit of effective enforcement of national inhibitions. * * * * *

IN Washington an agricultural commission appointed by the President prepares a long report on the requirements of farmers, setting forth the various methods by which the government may and should aid the agrarians.

In Chicago wheat soars above $2.05 a bushel. The grain crop in Europe is below normal this year. The law of supply and demand dictates that American wheat shall rise in price.

The report of the agricultural commission will be thousands of words in length. It might be contained in a few.

There is precedent for such a short report. Some time ago distillers of whiskey in the British Isles were in a controversy over the rights of various companies to label their brands as Scotch. After much pressure the government appointed a commission to answer the question: "What is Scotch whiskey?"

The commission met, heard expert testimony for almost a year, deliberated the question from every conceivable angle. Finally the findings of the commission were ready. Distillers awaited its publication with anxiety.

When the report was submitted, it read as follows: "Your commission begs to report that Scotch whiskey is whiskey that is made in Scotland." * * * * *

The agricultural commission might report with truth and brevity as follows: "Your commission begs to report that the fortunes of farmers depend on basic economic law." * * * * *

OBJECTIONS to moving pictures injurious to young people should be accompanied by the determination of parents to encourage the screening of proper films, pictures primarily designed for the wholesome entertainment and edification of children.

Criticisms of moving pictures are answered by the industry with the declaration that the studios are giving the people what they demand.

Many films of high educational and entertainment value are released. If those who criticize the ill-effects of movies would patronize the better pictures more extensively their criticisms would carry more weight.

All of which is brought to mind by the announcement that the screen version of James M. Barrie's "Peter Pan" will be shown at the Torrance theatre on Thursday and Friday, Feb. 5 and 6.

It is our hope that every child in this entire district will be able to see this picture.

All the tender sympathies that are Barrie's are portrayed truthfully in the film. The beauty of the fairy-story has lost nothing in the moving picture version, which is saying much in these days when moving picture directors deem it their privilege to alter the classics.

Any child will love "Peter Pan"—and there is something fundamentally wrong with the grownup who does not find himself carried back by the picture to the delicious days of childhood.

The writer left the theatre in Los Angeles after seeing "Peter Pan," feeling emboldened for the emotions he had just found welling delightfully in his breast.

The picture is as appealing to a man of 60 as it is to a child of four.

YET IT WAS NOT A BOX-OFFICE SUCCESS IN LOS ANGELES.

Everyone here who believes in wholesome, lovable, entertaining pictures for young and old should pay their way to see Betty Bronson and Ernest Torrance in "Peter Pan."

This editorial is published in the hope that people here will prove their desire for better pictures by patronizing one that is better.
