AFFAIRS of the HEART

By Mrs. Thompson

ALICE: The article you mention is a laxative. The persons who laughed have a vulgar sense of humor.

A young man who confesses he has never been kissed gives his views on kissing in the following letter:

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I write, inspired by a letter that appeared in your column, signed by a girl, "Thank You." She writes concerning another writer of your column, "An Experienced College Student"-a man who writes unfavorably of girls submitting to the passion of promiscuous kissing.

She insinuates that the above named meant it only to apply to girls. I believe that any man, who declares certain principles that girls should live up to, who can and don't live up to them himself is subnormal, and there is no reason why anyone should think that this college student is so afflicted.

She gives the impression that to resist any impulse is one of the hardest things to do and that few boys make any resistance. I am a young man of 21 and have mingled with the fair sex a great deal but have not once kissed a girl and I am still alive and happy and do not expect any museum to call me for a display in a glass-case. I know some, and I hope there are many more than I know of, who still regard a kiss as something more valuable, as a diamond that brightens and cheers rather than as mud in which to grovel, even if pleasure is found in so doing.

A thing is precious because of its scarcity and when kissing is made as plentiful as mud and those who enjoy wallowing in it can less keenly experience the diamond that brightens, that elevates, that exalts, that exhilarates as I believe one should although I still remain only a SPECTATOR.

We would like for young men who are more or less experienced in kissing to express their views.

W. B. A. NOTES

The officers and a number of the members of the W. B. A. met at the home of Commander Roberts last Monday evening, and in a body motored to the home of Lieutenant-Commander Blanchard in Lawndale for the regular officers' meeting and social evening. After the usual discourse the lieutenant-commander served delicious refreshments and all voted the evening a success.

The regular meeting of the W. B. A. will be held Tuesday evening, March 9, and the members are urged to be present, as there is to be a practice after the meeting. Capt. Stadig is very anxious to get the drill team going.

The W. B. A. will hold an apron and cooked food sale Saturday, March 20, at the Torrance Feed and Fuel Store, with Sergt. Bradford in charge of the sale.

All members should attend the banquet Tuesday evening, March 16, and the rally on the afternoon and evening of the 17th, when Supreme Commander Binn M. West will be present.

with such a shiftless husband? Since you must support yourself, leave him and begin to save money so you will have something to care for yourself when you can no longer work. You have encouraged him in his idleness too long to expect him to reform, unless you leave him and force him to go to work.

GOOSIE GABLE: Do not drop him because of what other people say, so long as he is a "gentleman toward you," as you express it, toward you, as you express it, ever, if he breaks dates without explanation, and does not keep his promises.

BROWN EYES: The love avails of a 19-year-old boy are not to be taken too seriously. Don't worry about "holding" him.

DICK: A young man doesn't give a young woman jewelry unless they are engaged; and her kisses do not belong to him unless they are engaged.

M. F. H.: You say "All the boys that care for me I don't care for, and the ones I care for don't care for me." I cannot help you in your dilemma. You can only wait, hoping that you will meet some man you do care for. Surely you must think you attractive, if three have proposed to you.

CURLY: There is no way to test a boy's love, and at 17 you don't need to.

"If I don't get him back, I'll go to the dogs," says the author of the following letter, pining for the man she loves:

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Last winter I met a young man who is popular with most every one he has met. He is handsome, a good worker, a good singer, a great Christian Endeavor worker. When I met him he was very attentive, but did not ask for a date. My girls took things for granted, so he almost had to take me home from a party. He asked to call me up and I gave him my number. I started in my reform that very night. I quit all slang, and better yet, I didn't tell a single lie. He called every night and talked to me for fifteen to thirty minutes, but never asked for a date. One night I asked him to a party and with much hesitation he accepted. He still called up every evening and I asked him to sing at an entertainment I had charge of one evening. He promised to come, but he did not come and he never called up afterward. I heard of a program in which he was to sing, so a girl friend, myself and our dates went. When the program ended, we reached the door first. I think he wanted to speak about it, but he didn't wait on him. He walked along six feet behind us to the car line, but didn't attempt to overtake us. He lives on the other side of town, and I see him very seldom, but when I do chance to meet him he always arrests my attention and speaks friendly. He gave me candy the time he did call, and treated me as a lady. He didn't go into a rage of uncivil loving, like most boys do. He wouldn't say "hell" if he were there and he never lies or does unmanly things. His friends all love him, and so do I, even if he doesn't care for me. I've tried going with about 18 boys since I went with him, but he is my idol. I'm afraid I'm to blame. Should I call him up and ask for an apology, or should I speak to him when I meet him on the street some time? I have gone back to slang and lies since he lost interest, and I even cuss. I go with a manly boy now, but he runs with some wild boys, and I often am questioned for going with him. These two are the only ones I am the least interested in and I sure do want the first one back. If he knew how I prayed for him to return to calling me up he surely would call me, even if he hates me. Please let your conscience be your guide, the sky the limit, and don't sign my name. I will go back to his friendship if I don't get the dogs." T. D.

The young man's failure to appear at the party, and his subsequent failure to explain his non-appearance, is inexcusable, and he certainly owes you an apology. But it would never do for you to demand it. Shyness on his part may be to blame. However, it would be a mistake for you to be forward. Speak to him courteously when you meet, and seek to interest yourself in others.

SHES GOING AWAY
Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a junior in high school and I go with a girl who is also a junior. I love her with all my heart and she told me she loved me. She has promised to wait for me and I have been very happy. But now her folks have decided to move some six hundred miles away and I won't get a chance to see her for many years. She promised that she would go with no one else and always wait for me no matter where she was, and I did the same. I have done all I could to make her happy and I think she realizes it. Of course we can write, but just think of the temptations of city life and the things that might take her away. It is almost unbearable to me. It will be about three months before they leave. Is there anything I could do now, and afterward that would make me feel certain that my dreams would come true? DOWN-HEARTED.

You are making a mistake in asking the girl not to go with other young men, and also in promising to stay away from other girls. Both of you are too young to be tied to any such promise. Have more faith and believe that if your love is real it will stand the test of time and separation. Correspondence will help a great deal even if you do not see each other. Don't spoil the three months you have left with worry about the future. Let the future take care of itself and fill every hour that you are together with hope and happiness.
