Chimes to Awaken Train Passengers

Music of mission chimes will appropriately awaken passengers on the Padre between Los Angeles and San Francisco hereafter, according to Lawson Overman, district passenger agent for Southern Pacific Company in the harbor district.

In place of tugging at the bed covers to wake belated slumberers, porters will pass through the sleeping cars sounding reveille upon a four-toned set of chimes.

"Chimes make a pleasant way of awakening passengers in the morning," Overman said. "While not loud, the agreeably melodious tones accomplish the purpose in a manner satisfactory to the traveler. So comfortable has modern rail transportation become that many oversleep and must be awakened so they may breakfast before the train reaches its destination."
