Sessue Hayakawa Will Head Bill At Orpheum

Screen Star, Formerly Stage Luminary, Comes Back to the Boards

Another screen star who has been a favorite for many years has deserted the films to appear on the stage, and his venture, according to advance reports, has met with unusual success. He is Sessue Hayakawa, and he headlines the new Orpheum bill opening Sunday, Dec. 19. In addition to his appearance, which is considerably important, his return will mark the homecoming of one of Los Angeles' most popular stars. Hayakawa will appear in "The Bandit Prince," a one-act play adapted by Burnett Hershey from Mr. Hayakawa's book of the same name. He is supported by a large and capable cast. Several other outstanding features are also on the bill, among them being "The Ingenues," 20 musical maids who offer a lavishly staged series of music, song and dance with all the vigor and "pep" that 20 girls just out of college can muster; Eddie Lambert, star of many stage successes, in a new offering; Alleen Stanley, "The Victrola Girl"; and William and Joe Mandel. Lady Oden-Pearse, B. S. R. A. M., Ross Wyse Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Wyse, and Ed and Lee Travers complete the new show.
