W. Post has bought himself a woodshed niblick and has started in to split his own wood, according to C. A. Saxman who settles axes. Post says he furnishes everything but the energy. It ain't yet been determined whether W. Post intends to take all his exercise on the woodpile or merely augment his golf course calisthenics by working out on the fire-place fuel.

They was two boxes sleeping in Sam Levy's new house the other night and they got arrested. Sam says they is two times when a house should not ought to be used for sleeping and one is before it is built and the other is Saturday nights.

We run in the paper last wk. that the Torr. Mchts. was gonna play Hawthorne and it should have been Lawndale but Ed Tansey says the Lawndale team run in a flock of Hawthorne ringers so we don't have to beg nobuddys pardon.

We wouldn't anyway.

A guy comes in to Al Bond's the other day and his hair was about a foot long and ragged and he has a week's beard and he says gimme a shave and Al says don't you want a hair cut too and the guy says no I want a shave if I had needed a hair cut I would of said so and Al shaves him and says I think you have got your dates mixed up. The York picnic was last week, not today.

Money ain't needed at all these days. Charlie Jones he wants a radio set. My boss wants a electric ironer. Gene DeBra likes to advertise and pay his bill with trade. So I gets a radio set and gives Gene credit on our books and then I give Charlie the set and he delivers the ironer to our house. Both Charlie and me had to pay Gene some cash in the deal and we each give him a post dated check. Harvel Guttenfelder engineered the deal and wanted a commission. Nobuddy was hurt.

To the pink that tells you things ain't looking up in Torrance you tell him that he's all wet because Jack Isenstein is back in business here and Mac McDowell is planning to return.

Boss No. 2 to our house asks his mother why it rains and she tells him about clouds and he asks how the clouds get the water and she tells him about the sun pulling the water up out of the sea and he says why does it fall out of the clouds and she tells him about saturation and the force of gravity, and he says well if the earth pulls the water down instead of it going up from the clouds why don't the earth pull it down while the sun is pulling it up and his mama says well you better ask papa because I have got to run down to the store.

Thanks--For a Wonderful Time!

To the hundreds of guests who came to our Formal Opening and Second Anniversary Party last week end,—we wish to express our sincere gratitude. Your wonderful co-operation, we are sure, was beneficial to us all and has inspired us to re-double our efforts to please you in the future.

We want to especially thank the folks who came from distant points,—many outside of the city,—and we will make it worth your while to come often.

Again, Thanks to all for your friendly words of encouragement and the beautiful flowers.

Sincerely,
