

Reo Boosts for Workers' Education

Keeping youngsters in school who have to quit their education short to take a job, or whose earning capacity is not big enough to support their families, is a task which the public school system is facing today, and one that is being successfully worked out through vocational education.

In many cases arrangements are made with business concerns to give part-time employment to boys who are attending high school, and wherever such a system is in operation the Reo Motor Car company branches and dealers are usually among the firms giving enthusiastic support, says M. J. Fix, local Reo dealer.

A Real Relic in Old Los Angeles

A visit to Los Angeles is hardly complete without a visit to the city's oldest surviving landmark, The Church of Our Lady Queen of the Angels, located on the west side of North Main street, facing the Plaza, according to the Touring Department of the National Automobile Club.

It is open daily to visitors and the entrance is via the north door, reached through an outer court or garden. The first chapel was a small adobe structure erected in 1784 near the southeast corner of Bellows street and North Broadway. In 1812 plans for a larger building were approved and the cornerstone was laid August 15, 1811, on a site somewhere east of the old Plaza.

In the great flood of 1815, the river left its channel and rose so near to the lower side of the Plaza that a new site was chosen on higher ground and the present church was begun in 1818. The church was dedicated December 8, 1822 and is unique among the early Spanish chapels in having been, in part, constructed by an American, Joseph Chapman, who came to California with Bourard, the French privateer, when the latter descended upon Santa Barbara in 1818.

In 1859, a period of unprecedented rain did great damage to many buildings and the adobe front of the church tumbled to the street in an impassable heap. When restored in 1861 the church was modeled and largely rebuilt from the old material; the red-tiled roof was replaced with shingles, the tower altered, the grounds enclosed and planted with trees and the old adobe parish house replaced by a brick structure.

The church was again restored in 1912 and the present memorial windows installed. The seating capacity is 500. On the street outside, over the entrance are three stone tablets with Spanish inscriptions and at the right of the north door is a tablet commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the erection of the church. The interior contains a few old Spanish paintings and statues of saints.

Southern Pacific to Open Yosemite Overnight Service

An all year around, overnight sleeping car service from Southern California to Yosemite Valley via Southern Pacific lines will go in effect Saturday, Dec. 17, according to an announcement made today by Lawson Overman, district passenger agent of the Southern Pacific.

The sleeper will operate on the West Coast Limited train, leaving Los Angeles at 6:05 P. M., daily, with arrival at El Portal at 10:00 A. M. following morning. An observation car will be carried via the Yosemite Valley railroad, giving passengers an excellent opportunity to view the scenic beauty along the Merced river.

This new service will be a permanent all year around service and will without doubt become very popular with visitors to Yosemite Valley, according to Mr. Overman.
