paratus invented by Austin G. Cooley for broadcasting pictures by radio. Radio experts associated with the inventor declare that the apparatus transforms light waves into sound waves, broadcasts the sound waves and turns them back into light waves so that they reproduce a picture for the receiver. The pictures, it is said, can be broadcasted from any station and can be picked up by any home set, but they remain nothing but sound unless the receiver has the transforming apparatus.

Now You Tell One

HANK Ulbright bought a new BUICK car from DICK Flaherty last week and CHARLES Schultz asked him HOW he expected to EVER pay the RUNNING EXPENSES on a BUS like that and HANK said that HIS car has a new kind of CARBURETOR that is supposed to SAVE 30% of the GAS and a new type of MANIFOLD that will save ANOTHER 25%. Then the IMPROVED motor saves 40% and he has some kind of a SPECIAL DINGUS on it that is GUARANTEED to save 35% and he EXPECTS to STOP every few miles and DRAIN off the SURPLUS. HE can pay for TIRES etc. by SELLING the surplus so his RUNNING EXPENSE will be NOTHING.
