Herbert Hoover—Humanitarian

By JOHN TWEEDDALE
OF TORRANCE

When at last the battered flags were furled, and the jaded legions of America and Europe, with mingled sensations of pleasure and pain, folded their war worn tents and departed hence; when the soulless bodies of countless sacrifices to the gods of hate filled the murky air with an eerie light; and when the ghastly specter of pestilence stood with his bloody sword suspended above a cowering disheartened world, Herbert Hoover, at the earnest solicitation of the governments of central and eastern Europe, again brought his master executive faculties to bear upon the bewildering, and apparently hopeless, situation in these various countries, and formed the "Supreme Economic Council."

This body of benevolent men, disregarding personal danger; forgetful of their own private affairs, and without thought of reward, save that which flows from the golden fountain of eternal life; came like the radiant glow of a heavenly dispensation, into this dismal abode of disease and death, and a rejuvenated people sprang from their noble effort, and order came quickly out of chaos.

The ports of Europe were opened, frontier obstructions withdrawn, reciprocal relations re-established with enemy countries, twenty-three separate and distinct food organizations formed in as many different states, transportation facilities restored; mines and other subordinates necessary to the existence of a people, brought into active operation.

Under Mr. Hoover's direction the "European Children's Fund," a purely philanthropic organization was formed, and through it the ministering angel of charity soared above the stricken areas where millions of exiled, infirm, half starved little children were ameliorated; over 6,000,000 being given shelter in canteens, homes, and other places of refuge, and medical attention, clothing and food provided through American generosity; for it is written: "Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish." (St. Matthew 18-14). This mighty undertaking was hardly completed, when the great typhus epidemic spread rapidly over Roumania and Poland, menacing the lives of the entire population of these two countries. Mr. Hoover immediately obtained, from enemy and allied armies, indispensable medical supplies and finally succeeded, after a hard battle, in overcoming it.

As the year 1919 drew towards a close, conditions throughout the affected regions were apparently so much improved as to no longer require Mr. Hoover's attention and he therefore returned to his home in California in the belief that he would be relieved from further public service of this kind. Within a comparatively short time, however, it developed that without his council and inspiring personal contact the governments of central and eastern Europe could not cope with the terrifying situation and a new food shortage thrust its venomous head from out the war torn soil. Mr. Hoover thereupon re-organized relief bodies, mobilized the support of American charitable agencies and by a vigorous campaign for funds, raised $38,000,000 and provided for 3,500,000 children in Poland, Germany, Austria, Estonia, Finland and other countries, over the winter of 1920-1921.

In the summer of 1921, heart-rending conditions developed in the new Soviet republic of Russia; a complete demoralization of industry, including agriculture, under the disorganized revolutionary regime, threatened annihilation, from famine and sickness; terrible epidemics of contagious disease spread like wild-fire towards the frontiers; endangering the population of adjoining states and the whole of Europe. With monies advanced by the American and Soviet governments, the Red Cross and other similar organizations, Mr. Hoover purchased almost 1,000,000 tons of medical supplies and provisions for the distressed inhabitants, and within sixty days 20,000 food stations had been provided, 120,000 Russian workers employed; 12,000,000 sufferers relieved; 7,000,000 men, women and children inoculated; 14,000 hospitals re-equipped and the scourge of typhus, smallpox, cholera and malarial fever overcome. As a result, less than 500,000 persons succumbed, instead of millions who would have met premature death, had less prompt, or less intelligent methods been employed.

MOUSSES AND FRAPPES
There are so many delectable frozen dishes which may be prepared with little work, and there is no better finish to a good dinner than some of these dishes.

Mousses and frappes are very decorative, and their color and shape can be enhanced by the serving. Use plates or glasses of delicate and contrasting color. Garnishes of candied fruit, mint leaves dipped in egg white and then in powdered or granulated sugar, whipped cream and various fruits all add to the beauty of the dish.

Apricot Mousse—Take one can of apricots, juice and fruit, mash through a sieve and add one-half cupful of sugar. Mix thoroughly and add one-half pint of whipped cream very slowly to the apricot mixture. Add a bit of salt and a few drops of almond extract. Pack in molds or mold and let stand for three and one-half hours. Use ice and salt for packing—equal measure of each. If frigid air is used prepare the day before or at least six hours before serving. This amount serves six nicely.

Apple Sauce Mousse—Season one cupful of thick cooked apple sauce with a bit of grated lemon peel, sugar to taste and a teaspoonful of butter. Preserved ginger and the sirup may be used if desired in place of the lemon. Cool, chill and freeze in three parts of ice to one of salt, stir until mushy, then pack to ripen.

Protect Your Investment in Your Model T Ford

THE Ford Motor Company is making a new car, but it is still proud of the Model T. It wants every owner of one of these cars to run it as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

Because of this policy and because of the investment that millions of motorists have in Model T cars, the Ford Motor Company will continue to make parts until, as Henry Ford himself says, "the last Model T is off the road."

More than eight million Model T Fords are still in active service, and many of them can be driven for two, three and five years and even longer.

So that you may get the greatest use over the longest period of time at the lowest cost, we suggest that you take your Model T Ford to the nearest Ford dealer and have him give you an estimate on the cost of any replacement parts that may be necessary.

You will find this the economical thing to do because a small expenditure may enable you to maintain or increase the value of the car and give you thousands of miles of additional service.

No matter where you live you can get these Ford parts at the same low prices as formerly and know they are made in the same way and of the same materials as those from which your car was originally assembled.

Labor cost is reasonable and a standard rate is charged for each operation so that you may know in advance exactly how much the complete job will cost.
