One Day It Rained in Paris—
Ha! Ha!—But It Brought Radium

One day it rained in Paris—and because of this simple occurrence radium was discovered. This is how it happened.
Professor Paul Becquerel was experimenting with uranium salts and various substances retards sunlight. Among other materials he placed a piece of pitchblende ore in the sun; then taking it into a dark room he found that it held the rays just as many other substances do.
But one day it rained—and Becquerel laid a piece of this ore with photographic plate without having it exposed to any light. He later developed the plate and found that the ore had produced rays without the help of the sun. In other words, he discovered that the rays came spontaneously from the ore.
This strange phenomenon he called radioactivity.
Little did he dream that pent up in this prosaic piece of ore was a powerful element—an energetic force as yet unknown to man. But—the sensitized photographic plate saw what the human eye had failed to see—tiny, invisible, penetrating rays.

It remained for the great Madame Curie to isolate from this ore the strange element that produced these rays. This element she called radium.
Soon thereafter science had in its grasp another element—known as mesothorium—250 times more active than radium.
It is beyond the power of the human mind to visualize the millions upon millions of rays that even a tiny speck of radium or mesothorium continuously produces.
This really great result of the discovery of radioactivity was that it placed in the hands of science an unending supply of rays.

Are You Getting
All the "Good"
Out Of Your Newspaper?

Besides a complete covering of all the local news in this Torrance-Lomita district, which you naturally expect in your newspaper, there are many worthwhile "features" in every issue of the Torrance Herald and Lomita News that are well worth your time in reading. Let us mention a few of them:

VOGUE FASHIONS and HOUSE AND GARDEN HINTS—admittedly the leaders in their sphere.

THE WEEK IN THE WORLD—a condensed summary of world events, written so you can understand it, and short enough so you can read it all in five minutes.

MR. KINGSLEY'S OBSERVATIONS—enlightened opinion and comments, that are read and "copied" by other papers throughout the Southwest.

NEWS OF THE SOUTHBAY & HARBOR DISTRICTS—Keeps you in touch with developments about you. News that is VITALLY IMPORTANT to YOU, but which is not of sufficient general interest to get into the Los Angeles newspapers.
