Suddenly, out of a spring sky...

All was well on the telephone front on April 27, 1928. Suddenly, out of a spring sky, rain began to fall, and as night came on this turned into a furious storm of sleet, snow and wind. In 48 hours, 3700 telephone poles and 7000 miles of wire were down; 39 exchanges were isolated; 11,000 telephones were silent.

Repair crews were instantly sent to the scene. In record time 1000 men from five states were on the job. Within 72 hours the isolated exchanges and telephones were back in service.

In any crisis there are no state lines in the Bell System. In all emergencies of flood or storm, as well as in the daily tasks of extending and maintaining the nation-wide network, is seen the wisdom of One Policy, One System, Universal Service.

California's Contribution To Farm Relief.

GIANNINI HALL, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

THE task of increasing, through scientific formulae, the size of the California farmer's bank account and reducing the number of mortgages, deeds of trust and promissory notes in his safe deposit box, has been undertaken by the State of California through the construction on its university campus at Berkeley of an experimental station in the tremendously vital field of agricultural economics. This new station, an imposing unit in the already dominant agricultural group at the University, will cost $500,000 and will be known as Giannini Hall. It will have an additional $1,000,000 as a working fund. Both amounts were donated by A. P. Giannini, prominent San Francisco and New York banker. All of the work of the station will be directed by the newly organized Giannini Foundation of Agricultural Economics, formed for the purpose of administering the fund.

Real Relief in Sight Already an interesting program has been mapped out, which will concern itself chiefly with the proper selection of land by the farmer and orchardist, and the most reasonable, profitable and expeditious handling of the crops produced. In addition, such items as the broken down or ill-favored farms or orchards will be studied and the depressing question of farm debt will be given particular consideration. In short, the station will attempt to put California agriculture and horticulture as a whole on a business basis.

Giannini Hall will be noted for its beauty as well as its great utility. It will be both a monumental structure in the modern architectural sense, and a structure that will conform closely to its natural environment of grassy undulations, meadows of wild and formal blossoms and massive, moss festooned oaks. Its architecture and atmosphere will suggest, in every respect, from the curved ramifications of farm activities and energies that will adorn its exterior and its entrances, to the quiet calm of its secluded studies and library rooms.

In general dimensions the building will be 280 feet over all, 64 feet through the center and 58 feet high. Each of the wings will be 63 feet wide. There will be a ground, main, second and third floor.

The building will make up the complement of the imposing agricultural square from which Agriculture Hall, the main building, looks out toward the West. It will resemble Hilgard Hall, another unit, but only in so far as it is necessary to make the units of the square conform generally. In every other sense it will be an individual and distinctive structure. Two noteworthy features will be conventionalized graven figures symbolic of the energies of agricultural economics, placed along the eastern facade, and a two story recessed portico, set off by decorative piers, on the great front.

The structure will house many diverse activities, all of them relating to the present pressing farm burdens. On the first or main floor will be the offices of the Foundation Director and the Dean of the College of Agriculture. This floor will also contain class rooms and experimental rooms of the State Division of Forestry. The second floor will be given over to the general offices of the Foundation, a department of forestry administration and a department of farm management. The third floor will contain offices of the National Park Service, the California Farm Bureau Extension, a department of irrigation investigation, a forestry experimental station and a unit of the Department of Entomology. The ground floor will contain archives and storage space.

All Agriculture Helped Through a decided change in the formal arrangement of corridors the building will achieve a new maximum of roominess and light. This change allows for a tier of small rooms, ideally suited for offices and on the opposite side, a tier of larger rooms for class and experimentation purposes.

The campus of the University of California is one of the most beautiful and distinctive in the world and Giannini Hall will face its greatest beauties. The landscape, broken by the great oaks that abound here, is perennially green. As a matter of pure convenience and utility the Hall is ideally situated, facing the main arteries of the student movement and being directly in the center of university life.

Giannini Hall is to be completed within a year and a half, or in time for the opening of the Fall semester of 1930.

With the completion of its agricultural square at the University of California, the state will be in a position to take care of every phase of agriculture from the moment that the farmer or grower starts in search of a suitable piece of land until his crops are placed on the tables of the ultimate consumers throughout the world.

Two great crowds attended the Methodist church Sunday. Rev. Young, pastor, preached Sunday morning a sermon in honor of Father A. J. Wightman, senior member of his church. The people of Torrance came and packed the church in honor of this Christian character, and respected citizen.

Sunday night, Rev. Don Householder preached a great message: "Prepare to Meet Thy God." In response to the call many were saved and the church greatly blessed. Rev. Young invites all the church people and citizens to come and enjoy the blessings of God. Services every night this week at 7:30.
