S OUP holds, and deserves, the honor of opening the evening meal in thousands of American homes.

Than a perfect soup there is no more delicious dish. Than a poor soup—watery and tasteless—there is no more ruinous prelude to what otherwise might have proved a thoroughly soul and appetizing repast.

To avoid the disaster of a really poor soup is not difficult.

Fairly good results are easy to attain. But to prepare the perfect soup? That is indeed an art which calls for all the housewife's skill in the choice and mixing of ingredients and the use of seasoning.

It is, however, an art which offers as its reward the heartfelt appreciation of all the diners at her board.

Home Nursing Hints

By Grace L. Smith, R. N.

Editor's Note: Because of the public's interest regarding infantile paralysis, Grace L. Smith, R.N., who is contributing this series of "Home Nursing Hints" to the Herald, has written the following informative article this week instead of her usual column. Her regular articles will be continued with next week's issue.

Infantile Paralysis

I have received so many letters within the last few weeks asking about the indicating symptoms of Poliomyelitis that I have decided to give my readers all I know about it now, instead of when we are writing about infectious diseases.

Infantile paralysis or as it is sometimes called, Polio, is a very sudden onset with a high temperature. The patient is usually very excitable and will cry from pain on being handled. They will usually have a severe headache due to congestion of blood in the head and severe vomiting. These are the preliminary symptoms. The secondary symptoms will be the sudden development of weakness of one or more groups of muscles.

During the present epidemic, which is not alarming, but as a preventative measure, call your physician immediately. Never try to take care of a child or adult with characteristic symptoms unless a doctor is in charge.

Origin Still Doubtful

Just how infantile paralysis gets started or the method of infection is still doubtful, but contact with the discharges from the nose, throat or bowels is likely, or from a patient who is a carrier of the disease.

If a case of infantile paralysis is reported in the school your child is attending, keep him out of school, a year lost in school is much more to be desired than the risk of paralysis. By keeping a child out of school means that picture shows and other places of amusement are also prohibited, as the disease is most communicable in its earlier stage.

Is Highly Infectious

In caring for a patient with infantile paralysis, remember always that you are contacting a highly infectious disease and every thing around the patient must be isolated, and the patient and nurse caring for the patient should be placed in quarantine until the infectious stage is over. Great care must be taken with all body discharges. They should be placed in a container and chloride of lime poured over such discharges before being emptied into the sewer.

CORRECTION

This "indoor" business—golf and baseball—caused a transposition of two stories on Page 4 of the second section of today's Herald. The error is regrettable and could not be remedied as it was not noticed until the section was off the press.

thrown clear of their machines. After the quietest, Detective Lieutenant Evans and Bigelow, who were detailed to the case immediately after the accident, stated that they would turn all evidence over to the district attorney's office for investigation. They indicated that they believed the evidence would warrant the issuance of at least a suspicion of manslaughter complaint against Miss Booth.

Spaad Not Known

It was testified by three witnesses to the crash that the woman driver was traveling at a high rate of speed while Mr. Leech was proceeding slowly across the intersection. Two women witnesses to the accident stated that they assisted in extricating Mr. Leech and Miss Booth from under the cars.

Detective Lieutenant Evans testified that both machines were badly damaged but that the impact practically caved in the side of the truck driven by the victim. The officer said that Miss Booth told him shortly after the crash that she had been having trouble with her motor and was working the choke at the time of the accident.

He said that she told him that she did not see the truck at all. In reply to the officer's question

COUNTY FAIR TO BE HELD SEPT. 12-21

"Census Celebration" is Theme of Pomona

Designated this year as the "Census Celebration" the ninth annual Los Angeles County Fair opening in Pomona on Friday, September 12, and continuing through Sunday, September 21, will take the form of a mighty harvest festival and pageant of industrial achievement in recognition of the great gains shown by the empire of the west in the past ten years.

Fair officials and civic leaders call attention to the fact that no more fitting recognition could be desired than one in which the unbounded natural and commercial achievements and the development of its cities, towns and communities are so vividly set forth as is the case with the big southland exposition.

In honor of the event President Herbert Hoover has been invited to officially open the celebration. Congressman W. E. Evans has been entrusted the presentation of the invitation. The fact that the president has planned to be on the coast and visit the state fair at Sacramento just preceding Los Angeles County Fair is taken as a strong indication that he will visit Pomona.

Preparations for the monster celebration have been in progress for months. In fact no sooner had the 1929 fair closed, than the initial steps were taken for the event this year. Important additions and innovations have been introduced which have transformed the 107 acres of fair grounds into a beautiful permanent exposition park so arranged as to care for an immense throng of people and any number of automobiles. A new exposition building, largest of its kind in the country, will this year house the agricultural and horticultural departments which were formerly in a monster tent.

Venetian Motif

Some time ago the fair achieved the enviable reputation of being the biggest country fair in America. To this has been added still another distinction—that of the most beautiful fair in the country. Again this year under the personal direction of Secretary-Manager C. B. Afferbaush the fair will be made a gloriously colorful and artistic event. A Venetian motif has been adopted for the scheme.
