Adjudicated a Legal Newspaper of Los Angeles County, Superior Court Case No. 218470, Dated March 22, 1927.

Mrs. Lynch Hurt In Auto Accident

The sudden stop of a car in front of that driven by Chas. H. Edwards of San Diego, who has been employed for several weeks in Torrance, was said to be the cause of a collision in Los Angeles Sunday in which Mrs. M. Louise Lynch was painfully injured.

Mrs. Lynch was thrown against the front of the car and received painful bruises. She was brought to Torrance and entered the Jared Sidney Torrance Memorial hospital for medical attention, later being removed to her home. Her injuries, while very painful, are not considered as serious.

Notes From Washington

By
Charles J. Colden
Congressman, 17th District

When I was a boy on the farm I plowed with a team of mules. I learned that the critters were not much on speed but were long on endurance. That when nettled they didn't very often stampe and were more inclined to a stubbornness. That if a mule is permitted his own way he would loaf along and take a nip here and there and forget that he had a task to perform. And there are some human beings like that. I have sometimes thought that I must have learned some of my traits from my companions in the corn field. Now that I have escaped the cornfields and the mules and am in Congress, I begin to see that there are others like myself and the mules, who don't like to be stampeded, and are inclined to get stubborn. When President Roosevelt began to send in his messages and his bills for the new program and the carrying out of his promises and the new deal the Democratic leaders in the House began driving the membership with a whip and a spur that probably has rarely been witnessed before in times of peace. The average member of Congress who has been here for a few terms follows along the tedious procedure, worships at the feet of precedence and seniority and takes his time in analyzing, criticizing, amending the measures that appear before him. By the time the original bill gets through the committee and through the House it has been paralyzed and demoralized until its author can scarcely recognize it. And the Senate does the same thing but more of it.

Every member has some legislative hobbies. It may be guarantee of bank deposits, silver, bonus, prohibition, sales tax, veteran benefits. He has made speeches to his constituents in which he has made positive declarations. His constituents took him at his word. Then comes along an avalanche from the president and the power of new leadership sweeps him off his feet and he finds himself whirled about and floundering like a chip on a swollen and raging river. He thus is able to regain his political footing on solid political foundations and he may not. Anyhow he gets drenched and ruffled and has gone through an uncomfortable experience which hasn't been softened any by the thrills and kicks he gets from the dissatisfied folks back home. If he votes with the president he gets swatted and if he votes against him he gets swatted.

But for years Congress has floundered lazily away while the country was plunging in mad speculation and finally landed at the bottom of the precipice in a heap. Yet Congress kept fooling around appropriating billions to save big business and never turned a hand to reach to the real roots of the depression with proper remedies. There are many doubts about some of the measures submitted by the president. But I am so tired and sick of the dilly-dallying in Washington that I welcome the courage and leadership of President Roosevelt and prefer to follow a leader of action who may make some mistakes than to continue in the lazy and ineffectual methods of the past. Furthermore, we have seen and heard but a part of the new program. It is rumored there is more to come. The wise citizen and the wise congressman will withhold his judgment until he has seen the complete picture. So I am helping make hay while the sun shines and doing my best to avoid getting balky and stubborn like my many friends of boyhood days. We are in a war against the depression and that is the big job right now.

Never in its history has California held such an important position in the legislative halls at Washington as now. No state in the Union can boast of two senators excelling the ability and experience of Johnson and McAdoo. Few senators can be placed in the same category. (I have wanted to work that word "category" ever since I had to learn to spell it when I was a boy.) McAdoo has had an important part in the recent financial legislation and has a financial program of his own that will be introduced later and is of far-reaching importance. His opinions on all banking and financial problems are eagerly sought and carefully considered.

If the House, California has never fared so well. From the very beginning of the present organization the importance of California was recognized. Clarence Lea, from Northern California, the one lone Democrat from the Golden State for some years, was rewarded for his fidelity and impartiality, by being elected chairman of the Democratic caucus without a contest. This was an unusual recognition of the political importance of California in the councils of the Democratic party.

California was handsomely recognized by the Democrats in the assignment of committees. Buck of Central California was given agriculture. Because of the diversified agricultural and horticultural interests of our state, and because of the important legislation now before that committee it has become one of the influential committees of the House. There were many aspirants for the place and California was fortunate. This assignment is particularly desirable to the members from the South and West as well as from New York, Pennsylvania and New England. Every corner of the country is deeply interested in the farm and ranch problems.

Mr. Church of Fresno was assigned to banking and currency, another very important committee at the present. Mr. Lea remained on his former committee of interstate and foreign commerce. Because of the importance of Los Angeles harbor to the entire Southwest I was ambitious to obtain rivers and harbors. During the lame-duck session I kept this matter in mind and did some quiet campaigning whenever opportunity was afforded. My good friend Dickinson of Missouri was active in my behalf and I have been told that I had the unanimous approval of the Democratic committee on committees although this is supposed to be a committee secret. The committee must have thought kindly of me for I was placed on points and also on enrolled bills, considering the heavy Democratic majority I fared unusually well for a new member. My attendance of the lame-duck session and my efforts to learn the ways of Congress made me many friends.

Tom Ford was placed on foreign affairs, a committee to which many aspirants. John Burke of Long Beach and John McGrath of the South San Francisco Bay region were both placed on naval affairs. The Republican members, George Burnham of San Diego and Ralph Eltze of Berkeley were also placed on naval affairs by the Republican committee on committees, so California has four members on this committee which plays an important part in the affairs of the Pacific coast. The member from Seattle was also named on this committee. So there will be some rivalry over navy projects on the Pacific coast. The Atlantic coast got 14 members, the Gulf coast two, the interior four and the Pacific six, counting the Hawaiian delegate. This gives you a picture of the gaudy San Pedro navy yard must get through before it gets to the hard-boiled appropriations committee.

Dockweiler was placed on post office and post roads, of importance to California. Parson Stubbs of Santa Maria received public lands, irrigation and reclamation, and Indian affairs. California is the only state that has a pastor and a church in Congress, and both voted for beer. Put that in your pipe and smoke it. Charles Kramer was assigned Indian affairs, immigration and naturalization, and accounts. John Hoepfel, a World War veteran, legislation and war claims. The Southern California delegation had hoped to get Hoepfel on military affairs as he has a long record in the army and is thoroughly informed on the subject.

After the Democrats had given California such splendid recognition, the Republicans made a strong bid for California support. Evans of Glendale was placed on ways and means, a splendid recognition of Southern California. Mrs. Kahn of San Francisco was moved up to appropriations and Dick Welch of San Francisco to merchant marine, radio and fisheries and other minor committees.

Carver of Oakland remains on rivers and harbors and is also on education. Englebright, Republican from Northern California, received minor appointments but was made the Republican whip whose chief duty is to get the Republican votes lined up on party measures and see that they answer the roll call. Sam Collins of Fullerton is on census, roads, Indian affairs and elections. The new Republican members did not fare so well as

—at Narbonne High School

An evening of real gaiety was spent by the members of Societas Latina, Narbonne's Latin club, and teachers of the school—March 30. Members who have attended several of these banquets, which are annual affairs, claim this one was the most successful to date. Garbed in complete Roman attire, the guests arrived at 6:15 at the sewing room, which was decorated like a Roman house, purple and white being the predominating colors. Roman customs was the theme of this year's banquet, and food, drink, entertainment, and decorations were as nearly as possible like those of about 64 B. C.

Upon arrival, the guests were conducted by "slaves" to the couches where they reclined, and were served the three-course dinner. An entertaining program, planned by Nondus Stump and Winifred Mulkern as chairman of the program committee, was presented during and between the courses of the dinner. The program consisted of a story by Merrill Pankey; Cato's speech by Neil Haynes; two flute solos by June Lindgren; a story by Alfred Thorsen; and acrobatic stunts by Veretta Gibson. Several short speeches were given by committeemen in explanation of rituals, ceremonies and customs.

The dinner was completed by the crowning and serving of the synthetic wine by the magister libendi or master of drinking, who gave the rules for drinking and called on the guests for jokes. During the drinking of the "wine," wreaths were worn and toasts made to the patron and patroness, Mr. Stump and Mrs. Marshall, faculty members.

The giving of the apophoreta, or favors, concluded the evening's hilarity.

LIQUOR CASE IS AGAIN POSTPONED

A liquor case against Edward J. Rafferty and Pat Brennan, arrested in Lomita in March, was continued for the second time when the parties appeared before Judge John Dennis, April 5. The case was first called March 13, and continued until yesterday. Further continuance was granted until April 21. The delays, have been due to the uncertain status of liquor cases in the face of changing county laws.

The new Democratic members. Our general friend, Bill Traeger, was assigned public buildings and grounds, and immigration and naturalization. I'll not repeat Bill's comment for he is bigger than I am.

The political division of the California delegation in the House has had a wholesome effect on both parties and along with the increase of the House delegation to 20 members has raised the political prestige of the Golden State to a position never held before. California is getting the benefits of the rivalry of the Democrats to hold it and the Republicans to win it back.

Candidate For Education Board To Speak Friday

LOMITA.—In addition to Mrs. Olive D. Matthews, harbor district candidate for the board of education, the Voters' League will have two other speakers, R. H. Goodpasture of the Unemployed Council, and George Mackey, business agent for the units, at its meeting tomorrow night.

Delegates from the league are attending regular meetings each Monday night of the council, held at Belvedere Gardens, where topics of importance to the organization are discussed. At present the council is taking up the matter of tax reduction, and is considering a proposition to join the Tax Reduction League. The members of the council are opposed to the extravagant spending of the taxpayers' money, and are concentrating their efforts toward putting a curb on these expenditures.
