N. B. P. W. CLUB TAKES SEA VOYAGE

Captain Fred Rebell of the "yacht" Elmer, brought the tang of the sea and the charm of the adventure to the National Business and Professional Women's Club Tuesday evening as he related the story of his journey across the Pacific in an 18-foot skiff. Storms and calms, trade winds, sharks, Fiji Islanders and native dancers, described in picturesque terms and flavored with a bit of the Australian accent, made a delightful sea-going for the members whose sea-going adventures have been limited to an occasional trip to Avalon.

Captain Rebell's story was all the more astonishing, when he stated that he studied navigation for two weeks and practiced in the bay at Sydney before he started on the 8000-mile trip. For instruments he had a home-made sextant, ship's log, Boy Scout's compass, and two cheap watches, but with their aid he had little trouble in making all the landfalls, and keeping on his course.

Musical numbers on the program were furnished by Miss Cornelia Hughes and Miss Ruth Barstow of Redondo Beach, in saxophone and piano duet, banjo solos by Tom Hart of Long Beach, and a number of Spanish songs by Isidro Lopez, accompanied by violin and guitar, entertainers until recently at the Pacific Coast Club, Long Beach.

Place cards for the occasion were small sailboats, made by Miss Beatrice Hughes, which with their vari-colored sails made a very attractive souvenir.

Miss Edna Cain, transportation chairman, introduced the speaker and entertainers.

Honoring the seventh birthday of George Lee, the tenth birthday of Dick Wheaton and the sixth birthday of Garry Wheaton, Mrs. Olive Lee entertained at the Wheaton home, 1225 Arlington avenue, Sunday afternoon. Eighteen guests were present at the gathering.

MONTE CARLO PARTY

Lighted candles on tables, lanterns hanging from rafters, buxom maids waiting to serve their vintage, the organ played, "Listen to the Mocking Birds," and the Legion Auxiliary ladies entertained their husbands at one of the most unique parties of the year. They called it a Monte Carlo party. Trunks long closed must have been opened, for the ladies appeared in ancient plaids, bustles, riding habits and what-not. The men were dressed as gold-diggers, city slickers, sheriffs and two-gun men. When entering the room each person received a bag of currency with which he could play games of chance at the various tables and pay for his drinks. The drinks consisted of fruit juices served in glasses to suit the drink ordered. A natty cigarette girl dispensed her candy and cigarettes throughout the evening. A vocal selection, "If He Wishes to Forget Me," and the reading, "A Face On the Barroom Floor," were well received. There was dancing to old tunes until the candles burned low. The hostess then called in all currency and prizes were awarded to Mrs. Robert Levellen and R. J. Deininger, who after playing most of the evening had more party currency or milk bottle tops, than anyone else.
