Paris Styles

By MARY KNIGHT
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, (U.P.)—Lace probably is the most friendly of all materials. It never gets stubborn and refuses to adapt itself to various matters. If you are the strictly feminine type it will envelop you in wisdom, and if you lean more toward the sturdy oak it in no way makes you a "sartie" for it can be crisp and utterly independent.

Agnes Drecol gives you a good idea about what you can do with lace. She uses it for an evening gown in black over a slip of black crepe satin. The pattern is very fine and web-like and there is an oval trail edged with knife-pleated volants of lace. The cape worn with it, and shaped just like the train, is of sky-blue lace.

Lucien Lelong interprets the lace movement with a lovely thing in black called "corinne." It is made over a slip of black crepe de chine and has a mat surface therefore, which is the direct reverse of the Drecol gown. Lelong produces a tunic effect in front but lets it descend on either side until it reaches the hem of the skirt. The corsage consists of two wide bands of lace, one at the front and at the waist at the center is a motif like a wide X made of atlas. The slip underneath has flesh-colored shoulder straps so that the effect is merely the lace over the shoulder and across the back.

TODAY'S FASHION TIP

Black lace for both the clinging vine and the sturdy oak.
