Plans For Yacht Harbor Are Sent To Supervisors

Plans for a yacht harbor to cost $1,325,000, located at Malaga Cove, based on a report by Ralph S. Brooks, were submitted to the board of supervisors this week and ultimately it is hoped will reach the board of United States army engineers for their study and approval.

According to the report the plans provide for a 4,000-foot breakwater in about 25 fathoms of water. The breakwater is proposed to be constructed of rock and to have a base of 122 feet and a top of 12 feet, costing $1,275,000. A concrete cap and railing would cost $30,000, and a light-house would cost an extra $20,000, bringing the total to $1,325,000. Approximately 42,000 cubic yards of rock and 1,780 cubic yards of concrete would be required for the project, according to estimates.

The report pointed out that there are 15,000 privately owned pleasure boats in Los Angeles county. Three methods of revenue were suggested, leasing the proposed harbor to a private yacht club, leasing it to private commercial interests, or operating it by the county recreation department. The last suggestion was recommended in the report.

The breakwater would provide 30 acres of still water, of which 130 acres would be available for yacht anchorage. It was pointed out. It was also stated that the plan would provide sanitary water for bathing and would permit later construction of clubhouses, bath-houses and other recreational centers.
