Hallowe'en Party

Business, Professional Women Entertain Employers Monday

The club-house, 1324 El Prado, where members of the National Business and Professional Woman's Club entertained for their employers Monday evening, had been especially decorated for the occasion. Pumpkins, card board cats and witches were placed about the room, apples hung on cords were attached to the rafters, cornstalks from which funny faces peeked were in all corners and soft lights made of the clubhouse a cheery place for a Halloween party.

Laila Bowen, in charge of the games, greeted the guests on their arrival at 8:00 p. m. and kept them in action until refreshments were served at 10:30 p. m.

Zip, the first game of the evening, furnished a chance for all to get acquainted with the persons next to them. Then came the apple paring contest in which Messrs. Rowe, Suttle, Rippy, Whyte, Jones and Hoover competed. Whyte was an easy winner. The fashion show was an amusing affair since the entries were unaware of what the contest really was. Ladies as models were draped in newspapers by men designers. The winner was to be acclaimed by applause from onlookers, but judges decided the entries were all equally good. Then came the apple-eating contest, the game of hunter and grab an arm. The game of shaking hands completed the entertainment and decided the partners for eats.

Announcement was made by the president that the club with friends who wish to attend, will visit the telephone office in Los Angeles, Monday evening, October 28. All members are asked to make reservations for the trip by calling Lute Fraser, phone 444.
