BOYS' DAY

Saturday some 21 young fellows will discard their academic robes, step out into the world of commerce as she is practiced here in Torrance. 21 local merchants, service stations, and automobile dealers have agreed to hire these 21 boys for the not-too-bad wage of $2 for 8 hours, with an hour off for lunch.

Now these boys are supposed to learn something about the way things are done in the stores to which they are assigned. Some will. But no doubt a majority will only learn how fireproof it becomes to stand on one's feet seven hours—a stretch.

Naturally, the merchants are anxious to establish good will and they sincerely hope that all the boys' friends and all the friends-of-the-friends-of-the-boy will drop in on him some time Saturday. You see, the boy who has the greatest number of guests for the day gets an extra five bucks in his pay envelope come quitting time.

So plan now to visit all or some of the boys next Saturday.

WALLY'S WEDDING RING

Neatly displayed in Alden Smith's (Howard's) jewelry store window is a wedding ring and matching engagement ring. Aside from being exceptionally charming & beautiful the rings have no significance. But upon closer inspection (providing you were present at the wedding) you will find that they are exact replicas of the rings His Highness Edward, Duke of Windsor, gave to his dearly beloved, Wallace Warfield, in the most sensational love affair since good old Mark Anthony took a gander at luscious Cleo from behind a clump of papyrus on the shallow banks of the Nile.

Notwithstanding, the rings are truly the work of master craftsmen and were copied from the originals.

BUXTON'S BABY BUCCY

Way back in 1900 B. C. (Before Chrysler) Buxton, local real estate operator plopped into the engineer's office of the New York City Hall building and after a rigorous and lengthy examination was handed one of the first automobile driver's licenses ever issued in this country. And he still has it today.

However, this officious looking document is not exactly a driver's license as we know one, but rather a permit from the city to drive and operate a steam engine. Because the car Bronson C. Buxton had was a Locomobile (Steamer, vintage 1900, and as snazzy (sneaky would probably be better) a jalopy as ever wheezed up a two percent grade. Only a hundred or so of these licenses were issued & Bronson believes his is the only one extant.

Bronson, at the time, was located in Newport, Rhode Island, swank home of millionaires, who gathered around Bronson's office and his Locomobile like two-buck gamblers around a bookie's office today. Bronson sold Virginia Vanderbilt a Locomobile for her husband W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., on his birthday. He also taught John Jacob Astor how to drive one of those horseless buggies.

The price of the Locomobile was $750 for the Runabout and $1200 for the Surrey, or 4 passenger job. Mud guards were extra as were headlights. Of course if you were content with the two kerosene lamps which were standard equipment, that was up to you. But if you wanted a pair of latest acetylene blinkers you paid extra.

Drifting to Chicago later, Bronson was with Reo & Apperson and later was one of the three founders of the Yellow Cab Company, now a big outfit. With the fold-up of the Apperson, Bronson entrained for California and left the automobile business for good.

ANSWERS & ANSWERS

Inspectors of the New York state department of education found many a chuckle in Regents examination answer papers, according to Dr. Warren W. Knox, director of the division of examinations and testing.

In checking the papers, inspectors found the following answers:

"Jefferson found a little verse in the Constitution whereby he could annex Louisiana."

"Before 1860 the Negro was cotton's closest friend."

"Cuba is Key West from Florida."

"The chief executive of the United States is the electric chair."

"To find the log of two-thirds, subtract the log of three from the log of two and find the monologue of the difference."

CITY HONORS ITS BOYS ALL NEXT WEEK TORRANCE HERALD

Store Training on Saturday is First Event on Program

Starting next Saturday, April 30, and continuing for the next seven days, boys of Torrance will take the spot light of community interest as national Boys' Week is observed here as never before. Boys of all ages will participate in the events of the week which have been arranged by James H. Burchett with the cooperation of school teachers, civic officials, pastors, business and industrial men and the boys themselves.

The week should produce an increased interest on the part of adults in the community toward the young men of the coming generation and a greater appreciation of the youngsters themselves of the problems confronting their elders. The first event on the week-long program has been arranged by The Herald with the hearty cooperation of the business men of the community.

In Mercantile Field Twenty-two boys from Torrance high school will be located at as many diversified business houses Saturday where they will be coached in the work or services of those establishments and receive a wage of $2 each for the day. In addition to this cash award, the Torrance Retail Merchants' association is donating a $5 prize which will be given the boy who registers the greatest number of guests or visitors for that day. Details of this Boys' Day in Business will be found in the adjoining column.

James Burchett had arranged most of the program before the sudden passing of his wife Saturday night. Principal Thomas Elson carried on with completing the plans outlined by the bereaved faculty member this week. Boys' Week will be marked here by the following events:

SATURDAY, April 30—IN BUSINESS: Boys to receive business training at local stores, shops and firms, receiving $2 each and an opportunity to win an additional $5 for receiving the most visitors. That night Dale Riley, city recreation director, and Tommy Wilkes, student athletic commissioner, will stage a "game night" and winner bake in the city park.

Feature Ball Game A softball game between boys of high school age and men will be played at 7:30 o'clock at the municipal park diamond. "Red" Dawson and Don Moser are slated to pitch for the boys' team which will include Orville Smith, Bill Fulton, Max Coast, Jimmy Jackson, Louis Briganti, Ralph Gilbert, Earl Lock, Johnny Schmidt and J. B. Wallace. Some of the men players will be Frank Egger, Roy Chambers, "Red" Moon, Johnny Roe, Bill Jergner, Bud Edwards, Paul Vonderahe, Walt Zaver, Eli Kuhn and any others who think they can stop the youngsters.

SUNDAY, May 1—In Church: A union service in observation of Boys' Week will be held by the Central Evangelical, Baptist, First Christian and Methodist churches in the Civic Auditorium at 7:30 o'clock. The theme will be "Ideals of Youth" and talks will be on the following phases of this subject: Rev. P. T. Porter, "Physical"; Rev. E. W. Matz, "Intellectual"; Rev. B. C. Brewster, "Social"; and Rev. C. M. Northrup, "Spiritual." Boys will also serve as ushers and Ralph Gilbert will preside. There will also be musical numbers and other parts of the program to be contributed by students.

MONDAY, May 2—IN INDUSTRY: A selected group of boys will tour the National Supply (Continued on Page 2-B)

YOUTH REVEALS INSPIRED VIEW OF FUTURE

"AGE OF OPPORTUNITY ALWAYS JUST BEGINNING"

I AM a boy. They tell me next week is my week. I don't know so much about that but I do know something about being a boy and, believe me, it's not all games, girls, good times and goofyness.

Nossie! And Boys' Week in Torrance should prove that to what my dad calls "my betters" here.

Boys are not the same the world over. Each of us is different even the way we do try to act alike on matters of dress, preference for sports over class literature and general disbelief in some of the old ideas of government, business, economics and what-not.

Some of these days we are going to have to take our place in this world-wide world and we are preparing for that opportunity right now. I don't mean that all our preparation is confined to school studies, either.

Many of us, more than you imagine, are keeping our eyes open to what you, the older generation, are doing and saying and absorbing all the stuff we can get on what makes, this old world tick. Frankly, a lot of us young fellows are rather discouraged over the outlook for our future, seeing the mess you adults have made of the present.

Wars, labor troubles, depressions and repressions, politics shot thru with graft and corruption—all this looks bad to us. But then some of us persist in thinking that the future, which looks dark to many who are older and wiser than we are, offers countless thrilling adventures. And anyone who predicts that progress is at an end is likely to get the "royal razz" from us.

Fussing up one of those picture magazines for a book the other day, I read of a M. Piermez, a Belgian banker who, around 1890, said: "It is not likely that there will be again an economic progress comparable to that by which this century has changed the face of the world."

And a man by the name of C. D. Wright, in his first report as commissioner of labor of the U. S., in 1886, surveyed the condition of the world.

He said all the railroads and canals needed had been built, a sufficient network of internawere to grow up and leave indelible marks on this world—Charlie Chaplin and Adolph Hitler.

Suppose those young people had taken the advice of the oldsters and had decided that the world's work was finished? It seems funny to us now. You know what Edison and Ford did. Thirteen years later Marconi, forgetting that the world had an "adequate network of communication" established in 1886, sent the first wireless message. Seventeen years later the Wrights, as you remember, did something about airplanes, forgetting that "all transportation problems had been solved."

And of course we all know what Steinmetz did in the realm of electricity and what Kettering and Chrysler have done in the field of automobiles.

So it seems to us—the younger generation—that the men needed in this world are the creative optimists who face the future with courage and intelligence, not the pessimists. Big businesses will be created by men who are still in elementary school. All present businesses will change. Many will probably be wiped out. The fit will survive and the unfit will perish, according to age-old laws.

The age of opportunity is always just beginning and we, the boys of Torrance, appreciate this Boys' Week whose program will allow us to get a little closer to that age.

Art Club Sees Gardena Paintings; Plans L. A. Trip

Having made a group visit to the Gardena high school exhibit of paintings Monday night, the Torrance Art club is now anticipating an all day junket to Los Angeles points of art interest Saturday. The club will tour the churches of St. Vincent and St. John, have a picnic lunch at Exposition park and afterwards see the painting and sculpture exhibit on view there. About 15 members enjoyed the Gardena exhibit, which is on view until May 4. Afterwards, the club group had refreshments at the home of Miss Ada Chase.

SPEAK YOUR PIECE!

Have you anything on your mind in the way of a constructive criticism, comment on municipal or neighborhood activities, cheers or jeers at local institutions?

The Herald today begins this weekly feature of "Speak Your Piece!" as result of the following communications received from local residents this week. The Herald will be glad to publish your letter (keep it brief as possible) providing: (1) It is signed with your name and address you may, if you wish, use a pen-name but we must insist on our knowing who you are; and (2) it is not libelous.

MISSING FIRST GOAL? Quoting from our Herald of Dec. 30, 1937: "Mayor Tolson said he believes the 'three great goals' for this coming year should be: (1) The beautification of Torrance boulevard and Western avenue entrances to the city."

Here it is 119 days since our mayor issued that statement and not a spade has disturbed the unsightliness of those two gateways to our fair city. I think about time the city should at least be talking of making that "goal" come true sometime this year.

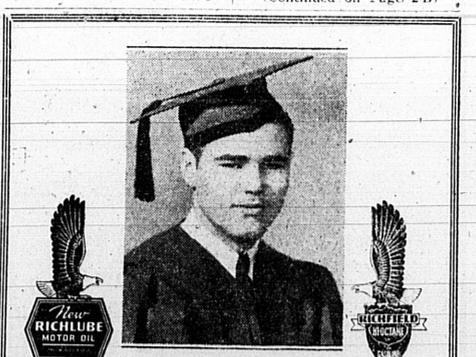

BEAUTIFIER

THAT CURE-FW LAW I learned about a county law the other day and now I'm beginning to wonder if the sponsors of these student dances in our Civic Auditorium are "contributing to the delinquency of minors." I was told that there is a county ordinance which makes it illegal for any child under the age of 16 to be out on the streets after 9 p. m., and for any youngster 18 or under to be out after 11:30 p. m.

If this is a fact then we've got a surprising number of young law-breakers in Torrance. It seems to me this is a good law and I would like to see it enforced. I've heard that there is no enforcement of this law unless a child gets in trouble and is haled before juvenile authorities. Why wait until the child becomes delinquent? Why not enforce it at all times—and also the curfew law we have right here in Torrance?
