"Trailer Vagabond" Tours NAUVOO, ILLINOIS

By WARREN BAYLEY

When the Mormons arrived in Quincy, Illinois, after their hurried departure from Missouri, they received an unexpected welcome. A committee of Quincy citizens passed a resolution condemning the Governor of Missouri and urged cooperation with the new arrivals.

The fertility of their nine years' effort to find a permanent home had depressed some of the Saints but the friendliness of Quincy citizens restored their optimism. Two large farms at Commerce, Illinois, were acquired and immediately the work of building a city was begun. Later Smith renamed the place Nauvoo, which he claimed meant "beautiful place" in Hebrew.

The Mormon dwellings had no more than begun to rise when an ambitious plan for foreign missionary work was inaugurated. Brigham Young, Wilford Woodruff and others of the twelve Apostles were dispatched to England where their efforts met with singular success. By 1850 there were 28,000 members of the church in England and Scotland, and 3,700 migrated to America between 1840 and 1846, taking up residence in Nauvoo.

Killed by Mob
As the city spread and flourished, the first intimations of opposition began to rumble here and there throughout the countryside. The political activities of the Mormons were responsible. In February 1844 when Smith announced himself as a candidate for president of the United States hostilities came out in the open. The destruction, by the Saints, of a rival printing plant was the spark which set off the explosion.

Anti-Mormon mobs were formed and prepared to sack the city. Governor Ford hurried to Carthage, a nearby village and urged that no illegal steps be taken. He sent word to Smith to surrender promising him security from mob action. On June 24 Joseph and his brother Hyrum gave themselves up and were imprisoned at Carthage charged with inciting a riot.

On Jan. 27 Smith and his brother with two friends were in the reception room of the jail, which bore no lock. Shortly after 5 o'clock a mob with blackened faces attacked the jail. A volley was fired up the stairway, another from outside the building and Hyrum Smith, shot through the skull, fell dead. Joseph ran to the window and was poised ready to leap out, when three musket balls struck him. The rioters, after ascertaining that he was dead, withdrew.

Secret Burial Place
The following day the bodies of Joseph and Hyrum were taken to Nauvoo, where they were met by a mournful procession. When the time came for the burial Joseph's wife, fearing vandals had the coffins filled with rocks and the bodies were secretly buried beneath the Nauvoo House a hotel then under construction.

Later they were moved again and buried under the spring-house floor by a trusted servant of Mrs. Smith's. From generation to generation the secret was kept by Smith's descendants and it was not until 1928 that the hiding place was revealed and the remains placed in their final resting place on the grounds of Smith's former home.

New Oldsmobiles Previewed in L.A.

"Bigger and Better in Everything" that was the theme which was dramatically presented to an enthusiastic group of Oldsmobile dealers, salesmen and members of the press at the dealer pre-showing of 1940 Oldsmobiles held in the Philharmonic Auditorium Monday morning. Grover C. Whyte, publisher of The Torrance Herald, was the guest of Arthur Mullin, local Oldsmobile dealer, at both the pre-showing and the luncheon at the Biltmore Hotel. The presentations were made by Eastern executives of Oldsmobile assisted by E. S. Shank, zone manager.

Three new lines—the Sixty, the Seventy, and the Ninety—afford the Oldsmobile dealer a wide range of models to show prospective buyers. Gleaming new front ends, wider and roomier bodies, and a further improvement of the famed "rhythmic ride" are among the highlights of the new Oldsmobile cars.

Most outstanding innovation is the "hydra-matic" gear shift, which entirely eliminates the clutch pedal and makes gear shifting, as far as the driver is concerned, a thing of the past. Besides being entirely automatic, there is a total absence of the "jerking" which so often accompanies manual gear shifting. Hydra-matic gear shifts are standard equipment on the 90 Series and optional on the 60 and 70 Series.

Model 60 Displayed Here
One of the new 1940 Series Sixty Oldsmobiles is now on display at Mullin's Service, 2053 Torrance boulevard, and is attracting much favorable comment. Beautifully streamlined from tip to tail lamp, it measured 16 1/2 feet from bumper to bumper, and is powered by a 95 h. p. econo-master engine which provides extra power with an actual saving in the use of gasoline and oil, Mullin says.

No prices have as yet been announced, but Mullin states that they will be "lower" than the 1939 models. Deliveries will be available about mid-October, he states.

TENSE DRAMATIC SCENE . . . Humphrey Bogart, center in the above "still" shot from the film, "You Can't Get Away With Murder," opening tonight at the Grand theatre, is one of the screen's best "heavies." The film is said to be a gripping portrayal of underworld life.

Merry Widow' Opens at Playhouse Sat.
The romantic atmosphere of 19th Century Paris lives again in the colorful scenes of Franz Lehár's "The Merry Widow," opening Saturday, Sept. 23, at the Hollywood Playhouse. The charming widow, the dashing Prince and the tippling, officious ambassador, played by Rena Case, Alex Callam and Thomas Glynn, dance and sing their ways through present day worries and nerves tension and the lilting strains of "The Merry Widow Waltz" send care flying thru the window.

Radio Singer Opens Studio in Redondo to Train Pupils
Herbert A. Hay, well-known radio singer, has opened a new studio at 519 South Guadalupe street, Redondo Beach, where he will specialize in teaching voice and preparing pupils for radio, concert and church work. Hay recently returned from a singing engagement at the San Francisco Exposition and has been heard on the air with Deanna Durbin. At the present, he is a soloist and instrumentalist with the L. A. Citadel band.

Four Join Navy From This Area
Four of the 17 young men who are enlisted in the U. S. Navy from Long Beach recruiting office so far this month are from this area, it was reported this week. They were: LeRoy Earl Stecker, Torrance high graduate and resident at 927 Arlington avenue; Edward Anthony Lopez of 24238 Hawthorne boulevard; Walteria; Robert William Libby, 2257 260th street, and Ernest Venema, 1926 Lomita boulevard, both of Lomita.

And you can learn a new dance—the "Back-to-Back."

New Play Leaders at WALTERIA

Recreation center activities in WALTERIA are now in charge of two new play directors, Earl Johnstone and Winifred Thornton, who have been transferred from the Torrance park playground. They replace Mrs. Naomi Biele and Charles Martinez, who were furloughed under new WPA regulations.

The new directors have arranged adult arts and crafts work for morning and afternoon programs, and games and social dancing for school children in late afternoons. The WALTERIA recreation center opens at 10 a. m. and closes at 5:30 p. m. daily except Sunday.

World Affairs Study Opening at Gardena Tonight

Another study of International Affairs under Dr. O. W. E. Cook, teacher, traveler and lecturer, will be made at the Gardena evening school this year. Last year considerable interest centered in the work in this field under Dr. Cook.

"National and international affairs cannot fail to be attractive to Americans these days. Wars in Europe and the Far East mean that we cannot fail to be at least intelligent on the problems presented. These upheavals in the affairs of nations and peoples have not come about without due causes—and we want to know them," Principal C. B. Baldwin, who also heads the Torrance Evening high school, pointed out this week.

"Dr. Cook presents these problems from the standpoint of one who has studied and thought. He knows history, and brings into the picture forces that really make history, and always makes it interesting. His course starts tonight in the study hall, first floor of the Gardena high school," Baldwin announced.
