WASTE PAPER ASKED FOR S. A.'s WELFARE AID

No woman would go out with an axe deliberately to destroy American timber. But the housewife who thoughtlessly throws away waste paper contributes just as wantonly to the destruction of American forests as the she did that very thing.

People are learning that the term "waste paper" is in reality a misnomer. Largely through the work of the Salvation Army they are seeing that discarded paper of all grades is a highly potential factor in the life of the country, both socially and economically.

The American Paper and Pulp Association declares that six tons of newsprint is the equivalent of one acre of standing timber. Throughout the United States the Salvation Army every year collects, sorts, bales and returns to the mills approximately 55,000 tons of paper of all grades, newsprint forming the bulk of the shipments.

A simple calculation in plain division, therefore, with allowance for shrinkage, shows that American housewives each year, through the Salvation Army, are conserving approximately 9,000 acres of standing timber. This is intelligent patriotism.

"Paper means food, clothing, shelter and independence to thousands of men every year in our institutions," stated Brigadier Sydney L. Cooke, officer in command of the Men's Social Service Department in the South Bay District. "These men are encouraged and their self-respect preserved until permanent employment is secured for them and they again take their place in the ranks of the normally self-supporting and independent."

Waste paper, magazines, cast-off clothing, discarded furniture, shoes, bedding, stoves, in fact anything that might be made useful will be welcomed by the laborers. Please phone Torrance 888 or drop a card to 1309 Post avenue, and the Salvation Army Red Shield truck will call at your convenience for your donation.
