Scouts to Collect Aluminum and Papers Friday

Have you any aluminum pots and pans you would like to donate to the cause of National Defense? Or any old newspapers and magazines you would like to give to the members of Boy Scout Troop 217, sponsored by the Christian church?
If so, have them ready tomorrow (Friday). Troop members will call at your home to collect both aluminum and old papers, according to Art Barnett, scoutmaster of Troop 217. The aluminum pieces will be turned over to help relieve the shortage in National Defense industries, and the money raised through the sale of old papers will help defray the expenses of the Boy Scouts.

There were fewer cases of smallpox in the United States in 1940 than in any previous year on record.

My cooperation extended to me and my staff during the progress of my auditing work," Cotton concluded.

Defense Emergency Creates New Jobs

ON the lips of thousands, draftees and civilians, men and women alike is the same question. "How will defense affect my job. What about my job and my future?"

In an attempt to answer the question Mrs. E. E. Brooke, a well-known employment expert, writes in the September issue of Cosmopolitan magazine that there will be thousands of jobs, and jobs of every kind. The crest of the current employment boom, according to Mrs. Brooke is still ahead of us. Over 3,000,000 jobs were filled in the last twelve months, and only four of the appropriated thirty-nine billion dollars for the defense effort have been spent so far.

Mrs. Brooke points to the recent streamlining of the Civil Service as further proof that there will be jobs, and well-paid ones too. Uncle Sam has become the largest single employer in the world. No longer are you likely to get stuck in one department for the system of promotions and transfers has been made far more elastic.

As for the draft affecting jobs of younger men, Mrs. Brooke says that over half of the selectees are between 21 and 24—men young enough not to have settled definitely upon a life career. But the term in the army will serve them in good stead. Their period of conscription will allow them to be themselves and determine more clearly exactly what they want to do when they are released. History is crowded with examples of men who were looked out of a job and, on to success, because they were thus driven to discover what they had in them.

"Would I, Mrs. Brooke asks, "as an employment counselor, put a well-spent turn in the Army on the plus side of a job applicant's ledger? Indeed I would!"

Bohemianism Is Dead In Greenwich Village

TIME was when New York's Greenwich Village, that borderline between uptown and downtown Manhattan, was a fabled realm. It was frequently called "The Latin Quarter of the western world," and apply so too, for Bohemianism was its byword. Free verse, free love, and free lunch, were part and parcel of its credo.

The scene has changed now, the old Village is vanishing, but Barney Gallant, who knew the life and times of the Village in its gaudy heyday, as few did, is not one to forget it. In the September issue of Cosmopolitan he recalls the fledgling writers, poets, actors, and artists—names to be reckoned with now—who were to be seen on the rambling streets in the Washington Square sector.

Gallant is probably best known as a restaurateur. Even now he hasn't deserted the Village, but he admits it has seen more glorious days—times when the nation was shocked by the traditions that Villagers flayed; by the revolutionary ideas that sprang from there; by a new code of morals, if any, that were adopted by its inhabitants.

In his story Gallant recounts the time he turned down sketches for a new revue by a young Englishman, Noel Coward by name. He remembers when Mark Hellinger sat behind the cash register in a cellar cafe; when the late O. O. McIntyre, then a Life staff press agent, and Roy Howard frequented his night club.

Other visitors were the Barrymore family, Ethel, John, and Lionel, and a new actress who was currently overshadowing the star in a Village play. That was Tullulah Bankhead. Improvised entertainment at Gallant's place was not unusual, but for the most part it was given by William Powell and Richard Barthelmess, unknown, as yet, to Hollywood. Those were the days, says Gallant wistfully, gone but not easily forgotten.

UNION INDUCTS LARGEST GROUP IN STATE

TORRANCE MEN SWELL ATTENDANCE . . . Pictured above is the mass initiation of what is believed to be the largest induction ceremonies ever held by a labor organization in California when more than 400 men, including many from Torrance, joined the Long Beach local No. 128 of the Oil Workers International, a C. I. O. affiliate. For report of the organization of the new National Supply O. W. I. union see Page 6-B.

Grievance Committees Of Local and Pittsburg Steel Plants Confer

Combining an outing with a business session, the Grievance committees of the Torrance and Pittsburg plants of the Columbia Steel Company gathered at June Lake last Saturday. They exchanged views on labor problems and instituted plans for departmental work agreements which will be proposed to supplement the C. I. O. contract.

Torrance men at the mountain lake conference were June Gallier, open hearth; George Steele, representing the sheet mill in place of Tom Ford who is recovering from a recent illness; Carl Steele, 12-inch rolling mill; Dale Wilson, maintenance department; and Neil McConlogue, representing President Tom Wagner of the local S. W. O. C. lodge, who had a previous engagement.

World in Fourth Stage of Revolution, U.S. Savant Says

BERKELEY—The world is in a fourth great period of world revolution, a period comparable to the Dawn of History, the breakdown of the Roman Empire, or the collapse of the Medieval system.

This is the statement of Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes, formerly professor of history at Columbia University and currently a member of the Summer Session staff on the Berkeley campus of the University of California.

California Leads in Defense Expenditures

California led all other states in national defense expenditures and contracts awarded during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941. On that date total expenditures and contract awards in this state amounted to $2,061,525,000. The State of New York held second place with $1,754,629,000; New Jersey was third with $1,469,899,000; Pennsylvania ranked fourth with $1,342,343,000; and Michigan was fifth with $1,094,917,000.

Mrs. Luke Nichol and sons Jimmy and Jerry left Friday for Lawrenceberg, N. M., where they will visit with her mother.

The Hometown Paper

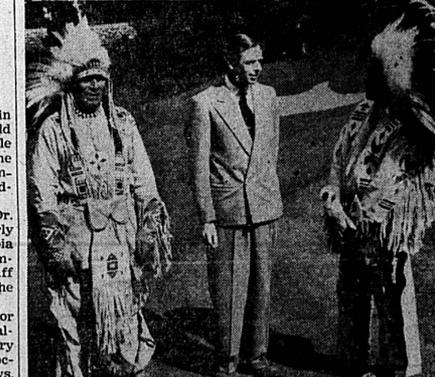

Everybody who enjoys reading his hometown news in his hometown paper will be glad to hear that "despite increased competition in the past decade from radio and big city dailies, the weekly newspaper, with its intimate local news on births, deaths and Ladies Aid suppers, is more than holding its own."

Quoting from national census figures, John B. Long, general manager of the California Newspaper Publishers Association, reports that California's weekly newspapers have been outranked in growth since 1929 by those of only one other state, Maryland.

Jimmy Jones' broken leg and the wedding of the grocer's pretty daughter may seem insignificant news to the radio commentator and the big metropolitan daily news editor, occupied with flashes from European battle fronts and national affairs. But local weddings and broken legs are vital news to any community and the hometown paper is its natural medium.

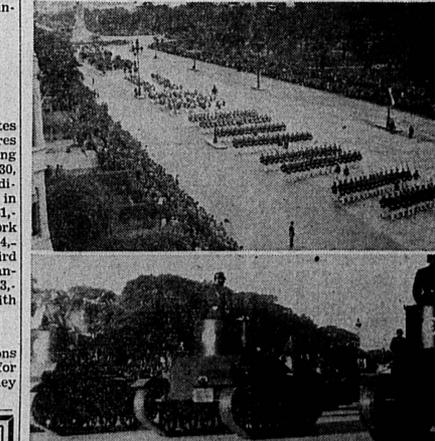

It will be reassuring to many to know that the hometown newspapers of the nation are on the up-grade, playing their part in the drama of daily living—and that California is at the head of the procession.
