

SHRINK PREVENTIVE

A new shrink-preventive treatment has been developed to keep woolen socks, issued American soldiers, from shrinking, the Ninth Service Command Quartermaster office, at Fort Douglas, Utah, said today.

BEN YOUNGKEN... a corporal in A.A.F., stationed at Carlsbad, N.M., is enjoying a 15 days' furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Youngken here.

AT MOUNTAIN RESORT Mrs. Bessie Myers spent the holidays at her Crestline cabin with her guests, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney E. Smith.

MAKE UP YOUR MIND

Everyone has encountered an after-thought driver—the type of motorist who decides to make a right turn after he's already in the left lane. These after-thought drivers never seem to realize that the time for making their decisions have passed after they are in the wrong lane. The Public Safety Department of the National Automobile Club asks you not to make the mistake of getting into one lane, and then crossing into the other lane in the way of other automobiles. After-thoughts need to be avoided when you're driving an automobile—think first, and you'll stay alive to think again.

Letters to Editor

(Editor's Note — Joseph C. Ferro, commander of the Gardena Veterans of Foreign Wars post, General Rosecrans No. 3261, has issued a statement denying the allegation of Drew Pearson, a columnist, that the names of Japanese-American heroes of the United States armed forces will be left off the Gardena civic honor roll. Ferro said, in a published statement, that "these boys (loyal Japanese-Americans) are entitled to the same recognition as any other American who is serving in the armed forces. All efforts will be made to secure their names and place them on the Gardena Honor Roll." The letter of Mrs. Alice Burger McElderry on this subject is being published with this explanation.)

Editor of Torrance Herald: On Dec. 21, an article was published in (a Los Angeles newspaper) which stated that the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post Gen. William T. Rosecrans at Gardena, has banned the names of Japanese-American soldiers from its service plaque. The soldier mentioned in this article, Kiyoichi Muranaga, of Gardena, was killed in action fighting with the American Army in Italy. Muranaga was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism.

Olds Issues New Year's Statement

By IRVING S. OLDS Chairman of Board of Directors of United States Steel Corp. V.E. day has not arrived, and the primary job of all of us must continue to be an all-out effort to attain complete victory over both Germany and Japan.

American industry can be proud of its remarkable production record since Pearl Harbor. But this is not the time to lessen the nation's productive effort, or to rest content with past achievements. The character of the war is constantly changing, and with these changes come demands from our armed forces for huge quantities of new and improved munitions and materiel, made of steel. The steel industry, which so far has met every war call made upon it, is resolved to do its utmost toward supplying steel in full quantity when and as needed in the war program.

We of U. S. Steel are honored to have had one of our mills selected as the pilot plant for the production of eight-inch shells. Other corporation plants are also delivering big shells in large quantities. Men and management at all of these mills will not be content until their shell production schedules are met completely—and on time.

When the war has been won, the patriotism, courage, energy and resourcefulness of the American people—outstandingly demonstrated during the war—will be a most vital factor in the solution of any difficulties of the postwar period.

BILLY DILLON... serving in A.A.F., in the Dutch East Indies, sends greetings to his friends here. He is a former Naubome and Notre Dame track star.

Christmas Eve, 1944. Editor, Torrance Herald: I have something on my mind that I would like to say. Maybe this will stop some of the people from crying and moaning about the small things they have to take. Such as rationing and paying taxes.

State Guard Troops Take Place of Regular Army Infantry, Says Officer

Members of the California State Guard are relieving for overseas duty regular Army infantry troops in the setup of the Western Defense Command, Maj. J. G. Braden, intelligence officer, on the staff of Maj. Gen. Cortlandt Parker, commanding the Southern California sector of the Western Defense Command, told a radio audience Thursday night.

Speaking on the program arranged by Maj. A. Milton Fish, commanding officer of the Second Battalion, 39th Regiment, of the State Guard, and Lt. Frank S. Selover, city editor of the Torrance Herald, battalion public relations and signal officer, through Chief of Police John Stroth and the Peace Officers Civil Service Association of California, Maj. Braden declared that "the men we see in these State Guard units are making a real sacrifice, but it is a patriotic one—essential to the successful prosecution of the war, for if these troops did not exist we would have to hold back regular Army infantry forces to do the job which is now charged to the State Guard."

A young soldier came in. He had been wounded overseas. Both of his arms will be useless for a while. He came over to my table and spoke to me. You see we are real old pals. I was really glad to see him not the way he had come back but he was happy to be home with his friends. Not a word about his injury or what he had done for us all.

People around us were moaning about not having gas to go out. All this boy wanted was to be home. Oh yes some of them looked at him with pity in their eyes and said to each other how terrible it was to be wounded. I am sure that this boy would rather have known that these people had been in back of him and his buddies who are still over there than to see pity.

Let me tell you it is really a good feeling to look a boy like that in the eyes and say, "Pal, I have been in back of you" and be able to really mean it. People don't seem to realize that their sons can come home the same way. It is possible. The war is far from over.

These boys want two things from us at home. The first is to write them at least once a week. The other is to buy War Bonds so they can come home soon.

If we do this, which is very small to what they will do, they are ready to give their lives. Some people might think this is just some person spouting off. Well it is time somebody did. This may stop some of the moaning and groaning of the poor people at home who have to take so much.

Thank you, ANONYMOUS. December 29, 1944. Editor, Torrance Herald:

On behalf of the War Finance Committee for Southern California, may I express our appreciation for the splendid support given us by all Southern California newspapers in the Sixth War Loan Drive. Once again the Press has proved how valuable a job it is doing in winning the war on the home front. Your editorial cooperation and the fine work of your advertising department in obtaining sponsors for War Bonds ads were both a vital factor in the success of the campaign.

In order to provide a continuing service to newspapers in this area, we will have available a supply of new advertising matrices in full page, five column and three column sizes. These mats may be obtained by calling at this office, if this is more convenient than sending directly to Chicago for them. The Treasury Department is urging that the newspaper advertising on War Bonds be continued between drives as an important educational factor. I know we can depend on your continued assistance.

Cordially yours, ELWOOD J. ROBINSON Vice Chairman War Finance Committee for Southern California Treasury Department 621 South Spring Street Los Angeles, California

As it is, these citizen soldiers are relieving regular Army soldiers for service overseas. "Close liaison is maintained between the Southern California sector of the Western Defense Command and the State Guard. Within a few minutes after orders are issued, Col. John C. French and his Ninth Tactical Command staff are at Gen. Parker's headquarters, in constant and direct communication with the battalions of his command which are mobilized immediately. The work of these State Guard units is definite, and their ability to perform has been demonstrated. We find them prepared, equipped, and ready to take the field as striking forces on a few moments notice to do a real job.

"The time they are putting into guard training and maneuvers is worthwhile and a necessary part of the military service."

First Lt. Robert Ward, United States Infantry, an inspector and instructor of State Guard troops for the Ninth Tactical Command, also spoke highly of the state infantrymen.

Lt. Ward said: "As an instructor of State Guardsmen in schools conducted by the Adjutant General's department, I can say that they are men of the highest quality, eager to learn and easy to train. As an inspector of State Guard troops, I have found that they stand up to regular Army standards in most instances, and could take their place beside regular Army troops, except that the regular infantry, of course, has the benefit of additional training which is not felt necessary to these state infantrymen serving the home front."

"Working with these State Guard troops as I have been doing since returning to the United States, I can say that the majority of them right now could take short refresher courses and, if their age permitted, could do service right beside our soldiers at the front. They know their training, they take good care of their equipment, and know their job and are willing to make the sacrifices to win."

Also appearing on the program were Chief of Police Stroth, who praised the liaison between his department and Company H, Torrance, commanded by Capt. R. L. Lewellen, Chief of Police Alvin F. Slaughter, of Long Beach, who gave like praise to the Long Beach units.
