

Torrance Chamber Endorses Rolling Hills Site For Proposed College

Directors of Torrance Chamber of Commerce Monday endorsed the Rolling Hills site for the proposed Los Angeles trade school and junior college originally planned for Bisby Slough area in Wilmington.

Sponsor of the Rolling Hills site, Dr. H. L. Snow, San Pedro, said he did not want the campaign for the Rolling Hills location to affect the total status of the college. In a statement to the Torrance Herald, he said: "We don't want any part in activity that could actually make the school board withhold the junior college from this area."

"Therefore, if there is truth in the recent announcement that our Rolling Hills offer with the resulting clamor for its acceptance may result in loss of the proposed $1,500,000 institute, we shall withdraw our offer."

"Our proposal was to give the 30-acre building site in East Rolling Hills to the Los Angeles Board of Education for use of the new Harbor Trade School and Junior College."

"If the School Board decides it prefers the East Rolling Hills site over all other sites available, we shall still give them the hill site free, requesting them to set up a student loan fund with the money appropriated by them for a site purchase."

"Otherwise, all clubs, Chambers of Commerce, members of the clergy, industrial leaders, and members of unions of the bay and harbor areas and other territory of this Junior College district will be urged to cease work on petitions as well as all other activities designed to influence the Board of Education into accepting the East Rolling Hills offer.

"Petition carriers have reported that practically everyone of the thousands of people contacted by them expressed opinions that the junior college should be placed on the hill."

Charles E. Hill Held To Answer On $30,000 Bail

Still bearing marks of a severe beating, Charles Ernest Hill, 32, of 621 North Irena ave., Redondo, was ordered held for a Superior Court trial by Judge Frank Carrell in Gardena Friday on charges of rape, kidnaping and committing a morals offense.

Hill, whose bond was set at $30,000, was identified by his 25-year-old victim, Mrs. Imogene Crenshaw, of 1210 Pacific Court, Lomita. From the witness stand she charged him with kidnaping her at pistol point from a friend's automobile on the night of Sept. 20, and of taking her into a gravel pit and raping her.

With amorous promises, she told how she had lured him to her home where the suspect was given a beating by two of Mrs. Crenshaw's friends.

SMALLEST SHETLAND PONY . . . Dwarfing these two tiny tykes is this Shetland pony colt at the Geo. P. Thatcher place in Walteria. Little Mary Elizabeth Selover, just turning 5, isn't so happy about it all for the colt had just stepped on her toe as her father, Frank S. Selover, city editor of the Torrance Herald was preparing to snap this picture. Phil Thatcher, 7, and a little fellow himself, has the week-old colt under control. The animal measures 27 inches in height, and is the first colt of a Shetland pony owned by the Thatchers.

Care for Stock During Autumn Months Advised

"With advent of autumn weather, livestock producers should give special attention to simple measures which will help curb disease losses during winter months," the American Veterinary Medical Association suggests in a bulletin issued this week.

"To guard against flu and pneumonia losses, hog houses, cow barns, poultry houses, and other buildings used by farm animals should be checked to provide proper ventilation and avoid excessive drafts," the bulletin declares. "This should be followed by a thorough cleaning and disinfection with hot cresol solution or lye water. All brooks, feed troughs, and other feeding equipment should be scrubbed and disinfected. Ample supplies of bedding should be on hand before cold weather sets in."

"During warm autumn days, all animals should be closely inspected for lice. If any are present, infested animals should be sprayed, dipped, or dusted with powder, according to the direction of a veterinarian. Hogs should be checked and if mange is present, they should be dipped in suitable solutions. Poultrymen can save trouble by ridding birds and poultry houses of mites and lice.

"After killing frosts have appeared, horses should be treated for bots and roundworms. Ewes and lambs should be freed from internal parasites before cold weather. Swine will avoid pneumonia losses if housed to prevent piling during cool nights and then chilling in early morning."

"Most winter diseases of livestock are best prevented by well planned precautions during the pleasant weather of autumn."

City Offered $10,000 For Corner Lot

The City of Torrance has been offered $10,000 for the southeast corner of El Prado and Cravens ave., was revealed this week, and the offer probably will have an effect of forcing a decision as to what the city intends to do with the expensive site.

While the identity of the person making the offer was not revealed, nor the intentions of the parties involved given, it is expected that the city will reject the offer to buy as the lot has been valued at as high as $15,000.

The site, 125 by 156 feet in size, was bought by the city about three years ago, "in order to save it" for civic center use. Several projects have been mentioned for this site, the one most frequently talked of being the proposed erection of a community recreation building there.

However, a survey of the Torrance recreation needs for the future resulted in the recommendation that the city utilize only larger areas for such purposes. Town lots are not large enough for recreational purposes, it was pointed out by Major George W. Braden, western representative of the National Playground Association, who made the survey of Torrance. He said that an outlying site of at least 25 acres should be utilized for a recreation building, to provide for activities for young and old alike, with parking spaces and other necessary areas provided.

Some time ago, Sam Levy, leading Torrance merchant, sought to buy the site and promised to erect a modern hotel building thereon. The council then turned a deaf ear to the proposal because they were saving the lot for a war memorial and recreation building. It is understood, however, that the city has abandoned the idea of using the site for a recreation building, and both the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion are planning their own buildings eliminating the need of the site for a "memorial" building.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars are taking up a community subscription to build a Veterans Memorial building at Gramercy ave. and Cabrillo ave.

The site also has been mentioned for the proposed fire station, but it was frowned upon because of the narrow streets and downtown traffic which interfere with the movement of big fire-fighting equipment.

The need for a modern, class A hotel in Torrance has been felt for many years, it is pointed out, and while the intention of the party offering to buy the lot has not been revealed, it is expected that the offer will revive Levy's project.

Tuberculin Testing Is Undertaken

The tuberculin testing campaign in Los Angeles city and county schools for the 1945-46 term began officially Sept. 25 it was announced by the Los Angeles County Tuberculosis and Health Association.

The first city school to be tuberculin tested in this year's campaign, was Jefferson High School with an enrollment of 2,075.

The first county school tested today was the Bloomfield School at Artesia with an enrollment of 204.

During this 1945-46 campaign, 21 city schools in all will take advantage of the tuberculin tests for students. The total enrollment of these schools is 31,668.

In all, 18 county school districts will be tested during the year, with a total enrollment of 14,326 students.

In all county schools, the tuberculin testing is conducted by the Los Angeles County Tuberculosis and Health Association. In the Los Angeles City Schools, the testing is made available to all students through the joint cooperation of the Parent-Teachers Association, the Los Angeles City Board of Education and the Los Angeles County Tuberculosis and Health Association.

All students with a positive reaction to the tuberculin tests will be offered x-rays and physical examinations during this 1945-46 health campaign.
