Undulant Fever Is Topic Of Dr. Swartout
 H. O. Swartout, M. D. P. H. Los Angeles County Health Officer

A typical case of undulant fever is characterized by a week or two of fever, followed by a week or two without fever, another week or two of fever, and so on.

For every person ill with a typical case of undulant fever, there are probably several others suffering from a chronic infection with the same kind of germs. They are troubled with low fever, loss of weight, and other symptoms common to many chronic infections such as chronic tuberculosis. The chronic infection may never completely disable its victim, but it makes him drag around wearily.

Three varieties of the germs are found characteristically in goats, cattle, and swine. In these animals they do not often cause any illness that can be noticed. The germs can be transmitted to humans through handling infected animals or their carcasses, through eating insufficiently cooked flesh from such animals, or through the use of raw milk from them.

Certified milk does not often contain the germs, because the cows on a certified milk dairy are tested at frequent intervals. Other grades of milk may be rendered safe by pasteurization.

There is nothing the victim can do to help himself except to take a nourishing and easily digested diet, avoid over-exertion, and get as much rest and sleep as he can; and no treatment that doctors can give can guarantee a cure. Prevention is of prime importance.

Army Life Is Preferable To Many Soldiers
 "Civilian life isn't what I expected!"

That statement is being heard increasingly often these days as local men return from long periods of military service. The problems of finding decent living quarters, obtaining good jobs at interesting work, are tough ones for the returning soldier. And more and more often, the soldier finally says: "I wish I were back in the Army."

Honorably discharged soldiers who have been facing the problems of civilian life will be interested in the terms of the new Voluntary Recruitment Act of 1945. Under its provisions, many inducements are offered to men who volunteer for peacetime service with the Regular Army.

The job of preserving the victory we have won is the job of the Regular Army," says Lt. Col. John L. Althouse, commanding officer of the Military Personnel Procurement Service in this area. "The most satisfactory way of raising that army is by volunteers, and that's what we're trying to do now. We feel sure the young men here will answer our call."

"Army A Good Job"

Main emphasis in the enlistment drive, the colonel declared, was the security and other advantages offered by the Army. "It's a good job, any way you look at it," he declared. Pointing out that a person reenlisting within 20 days of his discharge is automatically restored to his former rank, Col. Althouse added that all persons enrolling for three years are allowed to pick their own branch of the service. They also may select the area of the world in which they will serve.

Enlistments In Navy Are Clarified
 Word has just been received from W. M. Cox, enlistment recruiter in charge of the U.S. Navy recruiting station, Post Office building, San Pedro, that the ban on voluntary enlistments in the Navy has been removed.

Cox states there has been considerable misinformation about the Navy's recruiting policies in recent weeks and passes on the following facts:

Voluntary enlistments in the regular Navy are now open to men 17 to 30 inclusive. In other words, men of draft age (18 or older) may now voluntarily enlist in the Navy, without going through their draft boards, any time before actually reporting for induction.

For young men of 17, the period of enlistment in the regular Navy is until he reaches the age of 21. At 18 and over, the enlistment is for 4 years (it used to be 6).

Applications are still being accepted for enlistment in the Naval Reserve of men between the ages of 17 and 50. Service will probably be for the duration of the national emergency, to be determined by Congress or Presidential Proclamation.

Navy trade schools are open to regular Navy men. Ratings will be rapid for the men getting in on the "ground floor" of the peacetime Navy. Pay, clothing, good food, housing, medical care, early retirement, expert training, adventure, travel abroad, 30 days annual shore leave with pay, etc., all go toward making the peacetime Navy a great life. And remember, too, you'll be helping your Navy in its task of helping America win World Peace—which is just as important as winning the war.

Men who enlist now in either the regular Navy or Naval Reserve will still be able to qualify for the benefits of the G.I. Bill of Rights—education, home loans, business aids, etc.

Licensed Men Needed For Army Vessels
 The Los Angeles Port of Embarkation is still looking for hundreds of licensed marine personnel to operate army vessels overseas.

Needed immediately are masters and chief engineers with both limited and unlimited licenses, deck officers, engine room officers, and able bodied and ordinary seamen.

Masters with unlimited licenses will be paid $6026 per year, chief engineers with unlimited licenses, $5,498; masters and chief engineers with C licenses, $3449; first officers and first assistant engineers with C licenses, $3102; and second officers and second engineers with C licenses $2740. In addition to these salaries each man will be paid a bonus of $2.50 per day while in the overseas theatre and will get a liberal uniform allowance.

All men accepted to operate vessels overseas will be sent to New Orleans at government expense for three weeks training. Men interested in applying for these jobs should go to the Civilian Personnel Division, Building 505, Los Angeles Port of Embarkation, on Fries Avenue in Wilmington, or to the Personnel Office at the District Transportation Office, 411 West Fifth st., Los Angeles.
