

*This great nation will endure . . .
and will prosper.*

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

The furrows of our farms; the skyscrapers of our cities; and the industrious-ness of our people are welded into the entity which is the United States.

They are her strength and greatness; they are a bulwark against any threat.

Whether born of love of country, love of freedom or some abstract devotion difficult to put into words . . . the strength of the people has always sustained this nation and always will.

Those returning from the wars have been part of that strength.

They have fought that these United States may endure and prosper!
