A SNAPPY CUSTOMER... Officer Queen of the 13th Precinct, Washington, D. C., isn't taking any chances with this tough turtle that ventured up California Street on a foraging hunt. One man stumbled over the newly named Myrtle in the early morning hours, and got a lacerated ankle when he tried to make something of it. Culprit will be taken to a zoo.

Weather Man 'Tells All' About Southern California's Climate

Interested in the kind of weather in prospect here for July? Well, the long-range forecasters at the Los Angeles Weather Bureau have gone into the matter and this is it:

Night and morning low clouds will occur on over two-thirds of the mornings along the coast but on most mornings they will not extend further than 25 miles inland.

In July, clearing of low cloudiness can be expected before 11 o'clock in coastal valleys, shortly before noon on the coast near Santa Monica, and shortly thereafter as far south as San Diego.

The best time of the day to be at the beach will be between 1 and 5 since it is almost a 10 to 1 bet that it will be sunny with air temperature above 70 degrees those hours.

In Southern California July is more noted for its temperature than for its precipitation. Along the coast and in Los Angeles it takes a very unusual month to produce more than .10 of an inch of rainfall. However, on the east slopes of the mountains, particularly that portion south of San Jacinto, thunderstorms usually occur before the end of July.

Temperatures above 105 degrees are relatively common during July in the Coachella, Imperial and Colorado River valleys. In the Owens and Antelope valleys temperatures more frequently stay below 95. In the Barstow to Twenty-nine Palms area temperatures near 100 are common.

Hot spot is Death Valley, where a temperature of 134 degrees occurred on the 10th of July, 1914. This is within two degrees of the world's record, observed at Azizia, Libya, Sept. 12, 1922.

Immediately west of the coastal mountains in the San Bernardino-Riverside area, average July maximum temperatures are near 95 degrees and they decrease gradually to an average of about 75 degrees at the beaches.

In downtown Los Angeles a temperature of 83 degrees is typical for July. Hottest day of record in Los Angeles was July 25, 1891, with a high temperature of 109 degrees. July holds the record for highest temperature but it has not had as many days with temperatures above 100 as has the month of September.

'Home Town' Service Plan

The Sixth Army raised the curtain on a special nine-to-twelve-month "Home Town" recall to active duty campaign for veterans. The "Home Town" plan offers choice of organization and station, recall to active duty in grade held at time of discharge, guarantee of no overseas duty and assurance that vets' taking advantage of the offer would stay at the station of their choosing for the duration of their active duty.

Top feature of the "Home Town" plan is the inducement to men who were medical technicians or who did clerical or classification work in the Army. Some 206 veterans in the Sixth Army area who possess these qualifications will be offered assignments in recruiting offices in their own home town and be allowed to live at home.
