rooming house in search of McCoy and their $20.
McCoy had apparently slipped out the back door.
Apparently not finding the loss of their money entertaining the trio are then said by Delotta to have kicked in doors and smashed their way into his office in the rooming house. When they refused to leave the premises, Delotta said, he grabbed a 22 cal. rifle and fired five shots. One of the slugs struck O'Toole in the foot.
Officers called to the scene by Delotta rounded up the three men and also apprehended a man said to be McCoy—or the man who took their money.
A search of the man by the officers yielded only a dime. Later four persons came forward to testify that McCoy could not have been the man who accepted the $20 because they were with him at the time of the altercation. They indicated that the trio might have been mistaken in their identity of the two men since both were of the colored race and of the same build and age.

The party was sponsored by the Las Vecinas, woman's organization in the area, the Sportsman Club, and the Hollywood Riviera Homeowner's Association. A grant of $100 from the city of Torrance helped finance the Yule affair.
