Ex-Engineer Now Studying Law At U. S. Navy Base

Attending the seven-week Law School of Naval Justice at the U. S. Naval Base at Newport, Rhode Island, is Lt. Harry Burkholder, 27140 Buckskin drive, formerly an industrial engineer at National Supply Company.

Burkholder is among 140 officers attending the special training course to equip the officers with a knowledge of the New Uniform Code of Military Justice which will apply to the Army, Navy, and Coast Guard. The law, passed by Congress last year, will become effective June 1, 1951.

Many of the officers taking the course include Navy and Marine Corps personnel recently returned from the Korean war front.

Burkholder will return to his regular duties about February 20 with the Carrier Air Group 102 currently stationed in San Diego. He soon will board an Essex-type carrier with the other officers and men of his unit.

Perry Principal Stresses Three Rs For Students

Subscribing to the theory that there is hardly a subject in all life more important than the proper use of oral English, the principal of the Perry Elementary School in North Torrance is seeing that the eighth graders there are taught the English language—by speaking it, writing it, and spelling it.

"Special emphasis is placed on the three Rs in the Torrance schools to enable growing children to meet their present and future needs in life," says Lester Foster, Perry's principal.

"Here at Perry, we have used every known practical and down-to-earth method of perfecting the study of English," he says.

One way the school handles the problem of making the study of English more interesting than it might otherwise be is illustrated by the "broadcasts" put out by Don Porter's eighth grade class. The students have Radio Station "PERRY" on which each student acts as commentator and presents current news, and participates in forums and discussions.

Seaside Civic Goup Installs New Officials

Installed as the fourth president of the Seaside Homeowners Association last Wednesday was H. Douglas Horne, of 23211 Doris Way, who was elected by the association in the balloting counted New Year's Day. Horne succeeds Paul J. Murray.

Horne was installed, along with five other officers, at a dinner meeting of the association at a Hermosa Beach cafeteria. The installation meeting was attended by more than 60 Seaside residents.

Also installed at the meeting were Warren Schenck, vice-president; Fred Knouse, recording secretary; Mrs. Harry Jacobs, corresponding secretary; Bill Schmitz, treasurer; and Don Hall, sergeant-at-arms.

George Honsik, the outgoing vice-president, gave a resume of the year's activities, and outgoing president Murray reviewed the functions and obligations of the association for the new officers before turning the gavel over to Horne.

Outstanding among the activities for 1950, according to Murray, was the raising of $500 through various social activities to be used to purchase playground equipment and to provide maintenance for a recreation area in the community.
