

Junior Red Cross Leaders Attend Training Camp

Returning this week from the Junior Red Cross training camp at Camp Seelye in Crestline, were three officers of the Torrance High School chapter of the organization.

Attending the week-long sessions were Roger Wright, president, Lorita Shellman, treasurer, and Donald Fichtner, chairman of the gift box drive. Each will hold office during the fall semester at Torrance High.

Included in the training courses presented at Camp Seelye, according to Wright, were instructions in home nursing, water safety, leadership training, civil defense training, and Junior Red Cross Production. The latter is a special project of the organization and includes the manufacture of items for hospitalized persons.

For recreation the 175 High School students attending the camp participated in swimming, ping-pong, tennis, badminton, baseball, and other camp activities.

While there, the young campers contributed $113 to the emergency flood relief drive conducted by the Red Cross in a 30-minute collection.

A Mardi Gras party last Saturday night climaxed the outing.

through a license number supplied by Thomas Brown, operator of a station at Pacific Coast Highway and Hawthorne boulevard. Brown said that Escobar was in the process of holding up the station when he was scared off by a customer who drove into the station at that moment.

As Escobar darted out the police station through the up-town alleys during his escape he was chased by three Torrance officers, one of whom, Ralph Walker, fired two shots at the fleeing escapee. It was first thought that Escobar might have been wounded during the gunplay. He showed no wound marks, however.

When apprehended Escobar was carrying a straight edge razor but no gun. Police did not book him on a carrying a concealed weapon charge because he did not attempt to use the instrument as a weapon.

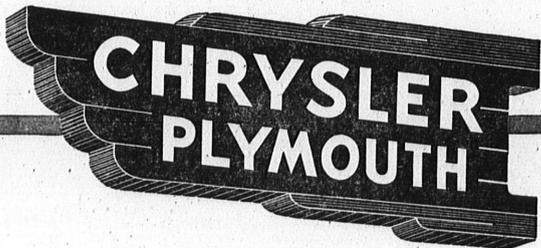

"There's no law against carrying a razor," Chief John Stroh said, "but using one for a weapon is something else again."

OLD POSTERS, SAME CORPS... Comparing the latest Marine Corps recruiting poster with those of World War I are Staff Sgt. Stanley Woodson (left) and Master Sgt. Ore Marton. The Leathernecks borrowed the ancient posters from the collection of the local American Legion Post. They hope the 37-year old poster will help attract the attention of prospective Marines who may obtain more information about the Corps from the two sergeants any Monday or Thursday afternoon at the Torrance Post Office.—(Herald Photo).
