Truth Without Fear—
A Fundamental of Freedom

In the atmosphere of security and relaxation of the home, the family reads this newspaper . . . finds there, factual accounts of the latest news, clearly separated from matters of opinion. It finds both sides of controversial issues, printed side by side so that each individual may decide for himself the course he will follow on any matter — be it for whom he will vote, for whom he will work or the products he will buy.

This uninhibited access to the truth is a fundamental of democratic society. It is largely responsible for the phenomenal growth of our nation. It must be cherished — zealously guarded, that we may continue to be free!
