Quality KILLED THE OCTOPUS

No other octopus is as dangerous as this one!

... It's the universally misused duplex outlet with three and four-way plugs.

National Electric's engineers long felt there was a better way to wire a home. So they went to work . . . came up with new, multi-outlet "Plug-in" Strip which provides an outlet every 18 or 6 inches. This surface wiring system is safe . . . attractive . . . permanent . . . and replaces the "octopus" with electrical convenience.

"Plug-in" Strip is only one example of how National Electric is constantly searching for . . . and frequently is the first to find . . . better ways of serving the public. Manufacturer of a quality line for nearly 50 years National Electric is constantly striving to give the consumer wiring materials that not only meet the standard but far exceed it.

That's the reason National Electric Products are specified by architects and electrical engineers, preferred by maintenance men, requested by electrical contractors and electricians. For a complete line of electrical materials for all types of construction . . . industrial, commercial, farm, and home . . . look to National Electric.
