Tryouts Ended for Little League Teams

Tryouts for Little League hopefuls which began April 25 were completed yesterday morning at Walteria Park after a total of 222 boys between the ages of eight and 13 had registered for the league.

A registration deadline was set and boys trying out for one of the league's teams were required to be present at two of the three tryouts, according to League President Doug Moir. This was done to eliminate stragglers coming into the league in the middle of the season, and to permit faster team organization.

Everything in the league is handled just like a major league baseball team.

Teams Organized
The boys are being worked out individually at tryouts and graded for performance by managers and coaches. Team managers will build their teams by bidding on the players with points. Each manager will start with the same number of points and must build his team with these points in competitive bidding.

Considerable work remains to be done on the field, according to Moir. He said fences and the backstop still must be built, the stands planted, and the grandstands constructed.

Dads Help
Some of the dads have been working at the field during spare hours, and on Saturdays and Sundays, Moir said. He said there are jobs for still more at the field. More coaches and umpires must be recruited before play starts, he said.

Officials of the league meet each Thursday evening at the YMCA building at Arlington and Plaza del Amo. Anyone interested in the league may attend the Thursday evening meeting at 7:30.
