Candidates Must Show Party Affiliation

At the election last November, the voters enacted a Constitutional amendment which forces candidates to show their party affiliation. Republicans must have "Rep." after their names, and Democrats must have "Dem." following their names. This overcomes one of the objections to California's cross-filing law and enables the voter to know the party membership of the candidate.

How Fact-Finding Committees Originated

Until the enactment of the Constitutional amendments requiring showing party affiliation after the name of a candidate, it was possible for the voters to be confused. No clear distinction was made between a Republican and a Democrat on the ballot. This gave rise to the custom of having "fact-finding committees" for the purpose of selecting one person who would carry the official endorsement of the party. He would then state on all his literature that he was the "official" candidate chosen by the fact-finding committee, and would denounce, at least by implication, all other candidates of his own party. However, the new requirement that a candidate show his party after his name does away with one of the original reasons for having the fact-finding committee.

Purpose of Primary Election Defeated by Fact-Finding Committee

The purpose of a primary election is to get away from "machine" or "ward-healing" politics. When a fact-finding committee says to the voters: "This is the only real Democratic candidate," then the voters are being misled and their interests are being undermined just as badly as they were in the old days of political "bosses" who picked their own candidates in "smoke-filled rooms" where the rank and file of voters had no opportunity to express themselves.

There Are Honest Fact-Finding Committees

There are honest fact-finding committees. This is especially true in a case where there is no candidate in the field, making it necessary for the committee to go out and look for one. The committee releases a public list of interested candidates in newspapers, and notifies all the party leaders that it is looking for a candidate. All prospective candidates then appear and are cross-examined at great length. They agree to abide by the decision of the committee, and then the chosen carries the party blessing. Of course, any candidate who does not appear before the committee, or any candidate who does not agree to abide by the committee's choice, is perfectly free to run for office in a legal, ethical manner, because that is the purpose of the primary election.

Loaded Candidate Selection Committee

A "loaded" candidate-selection committee is one which has the candidate selected in advance. At least a majority of the members know the outcome before the committee meets officially. It may go through the motions of conducting a hearing, but these are a farce. An example of this type of hearing is the one allegedly held in the 24th Congressional District to fill the vacancy created by the election of Congressman Norris Poulson to the office of Mayor of Los Angeles. For this reason, there will be no truly "official" Republican candidate for Congress at the special election to be called soon by Governor Warren.

Young Home-Owners Should Organize

There is an urgent need for an organization of home-owners, especially young home-owners, in order to "lobby" for tax reduction. There are several taxpayers' organizations already in existence, but they are largely supported by big corporations, including utilities, industries, etc. Likewise, there are several "property owners' associations, but most of their members are people who own several rental properties. I heartily agree that all of these organizations are engaged in a worthy cause, but I insist that the people who need tax reduction the most are the middle-income people who own and occupy their own homes.

If you agree with me, please send me a stamped, addressed envelope and I shall tell you about future developments in the tax reduction program.
