School Fight Renewed

Once again, California voters may have to come to the defense of the private schools of the state—operated for the most part by churches and religious groups.

A bitter battle was fought in California five years ago over Proposition 3, an initiative measure to repeal the property tax exemptions granted to parochial and private schools.

Now the same forces which brought this issue to a vote in 1952 are circulating petitions which ask voters next year to cancel out their previous decision.

The facts of the situation have not changed. Just as there was five years ago, sound economic reasons exist for not killing the private schools of the state through unfair and restrictive taxation. California, with its unprecedented growth, needs all the school facilities its taxpayers can provide to keep pace with the normal growth. Finding facilities for 250,000 more students now attending private schools would be costly and unnecessary.

The campaign now under way, which must appeal for large segments of support among the religious bigots, can serve no purpose but to renew the bitterness of the 1952 campaign.

And, if successful, it could deny parents the right to send their children to a private school of their choice at their own expense.

A Holiday Warning

Christmas decorations, jolly looking Santa Clause figures, and the tinsel of the holiday season are making appearances throughout the area these days.

To some, it may seem a little early, but it is not too early to issue a strong warning:

"You'd better watch out, or the sharpies will get you."

The feeling of generosity and happiness which accompanies the Christmas season is the tailor-made arena of the unethical, fast-talking sharpie who takes advantage of the hustle and ado of the season to ply his trade.

Always be careful when trading with strangers—but be doubly careful this time of the year. To be sure, trade with established stores and merchants whom you know.

It's the safest way to insure a happy holiday.

Salute to Youth

Today is "Youth Appreciation Day," a deserved recognition that the delinquent is not the general rule but the exception to the youth of today.

Sponsored annually by the Moose Lodges of the nation, "Youth Appreciation Day" is gaining support by responsible leaders of the cities and states of America, and may one day be a nationally proclaimed tribute to those young people of the majority who are learning to take their place as the adult leaders of tomorrow.

The HERALD joins the Torrance Moose Lodge, city officials, and others in offering its congratulations to the youth of this community on their day.

A Costly Lesson

Apparently the Post Office Department had to be told that buying locally can save high shipping costs.

Cement posts that support many street corner mail boxes were being bought from a single supplier—in Baltimore, Md.—and shipped all the way to the West Coast at a cost of more than $15 each.

Post Office officials began buying them locally for $2.70 apiece only after the Hoover Commission, set up to investigate government waste, disclosed the costly transcontinental practice.

Opinions of Others

The news from Johns Hopkins that Dr. Winston H. Price has come up with the first successful vaccine against one of the principal viruses causing the common cold deserves to be hailed widely—and it will be. Amid the cheering, however, a few sad notes will be struck. When the common cold begins to go, along with it will go the best copper-riveted excuse for sleeping in that was ever devised by man.—Winemucca (New.) Humboldt Star.

Many persons do not know what makes our economic system work. When a person is free to dream dreams, and free to make his dreams come true, he encounters in America a stimulating factor: competition.—Frederick (S.D.) News.

YOUR PROBLEMS by Ann Landers

She's Not the House Frau Type

Dear Ann: I'm seriously considering marriage (second one for both of us) but one thing has me puzzled. My fiancée doesn't want me to know anything about his business.

Although we've been going together over a year, he never once mentioned a business transaction, nor have I met any of his associates or clients. He's an investment counselor, has a lovely suite of offices and that's all I know.

Cultural Harmony
Editor, Torrance Herald:
Following is a copy of a letter sent this week to the Gardena city council and other community groups:

The Gardena Cooperative Nursery School is marking United Nations Week by expressing its pride in being a part of a community whose cultural harmony is being honored, not only here, but in Japan.

The basic principles of a cooperative nursery are strengthened by the environment of a community such as ours. Our nonsectarian, interracial policy is part of our strength just as it is a part of our democracy.

Our sponsor, the Alondra Park Methodist Church, has encouraged us in our program of reaching parents of all races and religions for membership in the school.

We extend our cordial invitation to all cultural groups to become a part of our membership, and add our congratulations to the city for its well-earned reputation. MRS. BERNARD KIRSH, President.

Parking Problems

Editor, Torrance Herald:
It seems very funny that the Torrance Police Department found it necessary to hire several new employees, but yet these new employees can't find anything better to do than ride around in residential districts and give the residents tickets for over-parking in front of their own homes.

At the very least they could have given residents fair warning that they are now enforcing parking limit signs, which in the past never were enforced. The very reason they weren't enforced is because these people have no other place in which they can park except in front of their own homes.

I feel the police department should find something in the way of police protection that would keep these new employees busy so they don't have to go around in residential districts and disturb the otherwise law abiding citizens.

MISS LYNNE EDGAR
And Other Sartori Ave. Residents.

If I were strictly a housefrau type it would be different. But I've been a business woman for 16 years and I'm no dummy. Furthermore, this seems unnatural because my first husband valued my opinions on business matters and consulted me often.

When I asked a few leading questions he sharply replied, "The reason Rita and I were divorced was because she couldn't keep her nose out of my business. I won't make that mistake again."

Tell me, Mrs. Landers, should a wife be kept completely in the dark about her husband's business? What do you think?—Loretta.

There's no pat answer to this one. It depends on the wife. Some wives don't want to know anything about business—it bores them. Others want to know TOO much and their prying can become overbearing.

In a good marriage a husband can discuss freely everything that interests him. A man who considers his wife something more than a doll with a sawdust head would, it seems, discuss the unusual or problem aspects of his work and ask for her opinions. Women are often more intuitive and a smart man knows it.

The wife who demonstrates good judgment and knows how to keep her mouth shut will gain her husband's confidence. Because of your friend's experience with Wife Number One it may take a while but be patient and don't pump the guy. You'll get the nod when you earn it.

Dear Ann: I've been a regular reader for a long time and now I need advice. My problem is rather unusual because I'm writing from jail.

I got into a bit of trouble and am serving 90 days. Since I was sentenced my girl hasn't been to visit me and she doesn't answer my letters. I've written her at least a dozen times to tell her I'm sorry for what happened and promised never to drink while driving again.

I hear from my family that she's dating other fellows and I feel pretty bad about it. I love her, Ann, and want to know how to get her back. Can you help me out?—C.C.J.

I can't help you OUT, but I'll try to help you. The rubber stamp on your letter "Censored—Cook County Jail" is evidence that you're on the level.

If your girl hasn't visited you or answered your letters, it means she's not interested—at least for now. One thing is certain, if she changes her mind she knows where to find you.

I hope you're sincere about never again trying to mix alcohol with gasoline. You're lucky you aren't in for manslaughter. The best way to win her back is to show by performance that you mean to travel the straight and narrow. Lip service alone won't do it, Buster.

Dear Ann: I'm a senior in high school and met a girl I like very much. She seemed interested at first but now she is very cold to me and is avoiding my presence.

I heard today she had a brother who looked exactly like me. He was killed in an accident two years ago and because of the strong resemblance she can't stand to be around me very long. It actually makes her cry. Should I try to reason with her or would it be best to just give up and try to get interested in someone else?—U.H.

Reasoning with her won't help. This is an emotional problem, and it's HERS, not yours. I recommend that you stay away and hope that time will ease her grief. There's a chance the sight of you will always set off a chain of associations which would make a romantic relationship impossible. If this proves to be the case—accept it.

Confidentially: Nature Boy:
There are names for fellows like you but no family newspaper would print it. If you were a real man you'd get an honest-to-goodness job and support yourself.

(Ann Landers will be happy to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of THE HERALD and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. (C) 1957, Field Enterprises, Inc.

Is the Gander Really a Worm?

What's sauce for the goose is not always sauce for the gander.

A recent Kiwanis bulletin points out that what sells a woman will not always sell her loving husband, or vice versa.

Can you imagine a woman buying the best-selling model of a dress, just like all the other women in town are wearing? Can you imagine a man being talked into purchasing an exclusive suit—completely different from anything any other man is sporting?

When she buys her clothes, milady prefers to get something different from the ones she has been wearing, while milord prefers something just like the ones he has worn for the last 10 years.

The little woman wouldn't be caught dead wearing her hair or her clothes that were worn in 1947, but her ever loving milord will be wearing the suit he bought after he got out of the Army.

It just points up what the fashion designers know well.

Middle East a Peace Threat

Teheran, Iran—In the past few weeks I sat in the homes and apartments of average businessmen and their families in Istanbul, Athens, Cairo, Nicosia, Cyprus, Jerusalem, Beirut, Tel Aviv. These cities and, temperaments truly represent some of the deep-rooted problems which plague the battered veins of the Middle East. These average families were Egyptian, Jewish, Greek, Turkish, Armenian, Lebanese, Palestinian, Jordanese, etc. A cross section of citizens which you might find in large and small cities in the U.S.—with one important difference. Most of these people are afraid of war, rebellion, civil crisis between themselves—inside their countries—as well as with their neighbors. Israel is the only exception where internal crisis is not feared.

I also talked with officials of the Arab states—like President Nasser, and had a rather lengthy private session, previously reported, with the most important and powerful Arab leader in the entire Middle East, Abdul Khalek Hassuna, secretary general of the whole Arab league—as well as with Prime Minister Ben Gurion and many other Israeli officials.

The Arabs I talked with expressed no fears of Russia, or Communist infiltration. "Our tragedies are so much more dangerous from within," I was told repeatedly, "that we are not worried about problems from without." This is the background for crisis in the Middle East; it is not just Nasser, Ben Gurion, Makarios, or the constant incidents and disputes between Arab and Jew—French and Algerian—or Greek and Turk, alone. Here is some background.

Polio Ready for Knock Out

After a concentrated three-year assault with the Salk vaccine, paralytic polio is now ready for a "knockout blow."

This was the good news recently released by Secretary of Health and Welfare Marion Folsom.

According to Mr. Folsom, there has been an 80 per cent decline in paralytic polio cases this year despite the fact that 37,000,000 persons under 40 have received no vaccine and 44,000,000 have had either one or two shots of the series of three.

Records for the first seven months list 1576 paralytic cases compared with 5241 last year and 7886 in 1955. There were 130 deaths in 1957, 220 in 1956 and 257 in 1955. Total cases fell from 21,667 two years ago to 4851 in 1957.

founded a village on the Bosphorus which they called Byzantium. From this humble beginning sprang Constantinople and the Byzantine era. This empire flourished and extended from Russia to the entire Mediterranean, only to be conquered by Sultan Mehmet, the Conqueror, who ascended to the Turkish throne in 1450.

The Turks changed the name of Constantinople to Istanbul—and there began the Greek-Turkish "question," which never ceased to bring periodic crisis and war between these nations. Yesterday it was Phylip of Macedonia, the wars between the kings of Berjama and Bithnia, then Septimus Severus, Constantine the Great—and today it is a small island called "Cyprus" and a plain priest called "Markarios" that's inflamed the age-old Greek-Turkish "question" all over again. The hatreds existing between Greek and Turk today are as deep-rooted in history as the hatreds between Arab and Jew—French and Algerian—Hashemite and Saudi—British and Cypriot, and so on between the millions of the Middle East.

It borders on the juvenile for anyone to suggest that the U.S. or the U.N. can step in and ameliorate these age-old problems of the Middle East with either dollars or U.N. resolutions. It will take faith and time and infinite patience to heal the wounds. There just isn't any one quick solution to the Middle East, because there is no such thing as a single problem, or controversy between single nations. It's a conglomeration of races, cultures, religions, hatreds, ethnology, language, hunger, exploitation from within and without.

The wealthy American and European tourists now invading the Middle East plush spas in Beirut, Istanbul, Cairo and Athens are not creating better understanding, but worse. The exhibition of wealth and luxury, in the midst of appalling hunger, creating a new problem in the Middle East to aggravate an already explosive situation.

It is always distressing to be reminded as we were by the riots against us in Formosa, Istanbul, Cairo, Beirut, Amman, that millions of people resent Americans—and they resent British and French, because we are richer, stronger, dress and live better. This resentment for Americans is now very apparent, even among our European allies.

The citizen of Israel, for example, is resented by the Arabs because he is living better and is more successful. The Algerians see the French occupy the best hotels and homes. The Cypriot observes the British living it up in Cyprus. The Egyptian was made to feel inferior right in his own home town of Cairo. This is back of some of the tensions and tragedies of the Middle East, aggravated by political, economic and ethical problems of long standing.

The other night I was sitting on the beautiful veranda of the plush Istanbul Hilton, having dinner with retired Cal Tech physicist Robert Burt and his wife Eleanor, from Pasadena. We were moon-struck with the beauty of the Bosphorus under a full moon. We were enjoying every delicacy and every fruit imaginable. But outside, in the homes of a million Turks not a cup of coffee, or meat, or cheese, or egg has been available to many for a year. This could be the spark that may inflame age-old rivalries all over again in the Middle East to a greater degree than power politics, or King Saud, Hussein, Nasser, Ben Burion, Makarios or MacMillan.

"If people will use the vaccine available, it is possible to give paralytic polio a knockout blow within the next year.

"It will be a tragedy if, simply because of public apathy, vaccine which might prevent paralysis or even death, lies on the shelf unused."

The secretary noted that last fall, use of the vaccine dropped sharply, supplies piled up in warehouses, and production was cut back. By last spring, however, the demand had risen to such a peak that supplies were short again and many scheduled community and industry vaccination programs had to be postponed.

Folsom said that this is the best time for medical societies, local health departments, schools, industries, and individual citizens and physicians to get together and make sure that everyone who needs protection gets it.

According to Folsom, the National foundation for Infantile Paralysis, the American Medical Assn., State and Territorial Health Officers, and the Advertising Council are all joining in a campaign this fall to urge vaccination of as many persons as possible with the full recommended schedule of three doses.
