"There is no real area of misunderstanding between the two countries," Sonmez told reporters. He said Turkey was fully on the side of the free world, and that "you don't get an anti-American feeling there as you do in some countries."

THE STANDARD of living cannot be compared to that of Americans "but neither does it compare in any other part of the world," Sonmez said. He pointed out that the standard of living in Turkey was higher than in other nations surrounding his country, and that Turkey has been in the vanguard of those nations accepting Western culture and conveniences. He also pointed out that widespread poverty existed in the nation as it does in other Middle-East countries.

Following the press conference, Mme. Sanli, Sonmez, and Lyle Newcomer, honorary Turkish consul of Los Angeles, were guests at a luncheon at the Palms and then went to the city hall for ceremonies which included raising of the Turkish flag on the city hall pole.

al, was stressed by Emerson Smith, field representative for the National Association of Real Estate Boards, in a talk last Friday to the Torrance-Lomita Board of Realtors.

Smith delivered the talk during a luncheon given in his honor by the Torrance-Lomita board at the Wayfarer's Restaurant in Lomita.

Torrance's Mayor Albert Isen presented Smith with a "key to the city," and pointed out Torrance's low delinquency rate in his discussion on city affairs.

In presenting a "Profile of a Realtor," Smith suggested that real estate salesmen working with realtor-brokers, be referred to as associates.

"Professionalism must be the ultimate aim of the realtor," Smith said. "And professionalism must proclaim a basic truth.

"The realtor is a builder of cities; he drains swamps, he builds homes. Through his efforts home ownership in the United States has become the greatest in the world," Smith pointed out.

"The realtor," he said, "should restrict his activities to what he is fitted for. He should refer matters requiring other professional talents to the proper professionals. In this way, the realtor maintains a progressive code of ethics."

An estimated 100 realtors and their guests attended the luncheon. Ken Miller, president of the Torrance-Lomita board, presided.
