. . . Ann Landers

and tells me maybe I shouldn't have married. A few months ago I told my mother of my trouble and she phoned my wife and offered to teach her. Then she REALLY blew up. What's wrong with her anyhow? BICARB BENEY.
Dear Bicar: Your mother's cooking is probably "what's wrong with her." You raved so about Mom's meals that your wife is afraid to compete. If she doesn't know, she should be told that eating out is at least twice as expensive as eating at home. Approach it from the economic angle. Buy her a good beginner's cook book and encourage her to try the simple things. And bear in mind, Buster, Mom's probably been at it for 25 years.

Dear Ann: I've been arguing with my husband for two years about this one thing. Whenever we go out socially he never introduces me to the people who are there. I stand around like a wooden Indian and he greets everyone, shakes hands, and acts as if he came alone. Can he be ashamed of me or what? I've done everything but hit him over the head. I've kicked him in the leg, pinched him, nudged him—nothing works. You seem to have a solution for everyone. How about—ME

Dear You: The usual husbandly response to a furtive kick in the leg, a pinch or a nudge is a good loud "OUCH" . . . so why don't you get smart?
Accept the fact your husband has some sort of block about introducing you. He brings you along which indicates he's not ashamed of you—so rule that out. Simply introduce yourself. Extend your hand and say "I'm Zelda Zilch. Clyde's wife."

Does almost everyone have a good time but you? If so, send for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How To Be Well-Liked" with your request 20 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.
(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)
