A former link trainer instructor is getting some teaching experience he never expected to repeat when he got out of the service.

J. C. Cummings, North High School science instructor, is teaching six North High students the use of the link trainer. The instruction is not designed to teach them how to fly or navigate, however, but to show the application of science and math in a practical form.

Recently Bought

The trainer recently was purchased by the Torrance Unified School District for $75 as surplus from the Air Force. The current class, with six top students from physics and trigonometry classes, is an exploratory effort.

For six weeks Marie Akashi, David Couch, Jane Holmes, Linda Jordan, Dan Martinez and Ken Weeks will get instruction during the noon hour from Cummings.

The course involves 12 hours of intensive lectures explaining the use of the trainer, followed by three hours of flight time for each student. Most of the study covers physical and mathematical concepts involved.

"It is used in the same sense as a saw in woodshop classes," Cummings said.

The trainer is a wooden reproduction of a military plane, but has the same instruments as a regular plane. It is used to give training in wind resistance, turns, dives, and other problems a pilot faces.

Students plot their own courses of flying and then have to make the correct calculations to keep themselves on course while "flying."

If the present program proves successful, it may later be included in the regular program of advanced science and math.

Doctor at Meeting

Dr. Don C. Moshos, of Torrance, is attending a meeting of more than 5000 family doctors in Memorial Auditorium, Dallas, Tex., for the American Academy of General Practice tenth annual Scientific Assembly.

Journalism Students Take Five Awards at Convention

Five top photo and journalism awards are on display on the El Camino College campus this week following the attendance of six Warrior representatives at the annual convention of the Journalism Assn. of Junior Colleges in Fresno.

Additional to the five awards won by the ECC students, two first place trophies were presented to El Camino College alumni who represented Long Beach and San Jose State Colleges in writing competition for university and four-year college students.

Four state college journalism associations with a total representation of over 300 shared convention facilities during the past week end at the Hacienda Motel in Fresno. Groups convening with the JAJC were the junior and four-year college honorary fraternities, Beta Phi Gamma and Alpha Phi Gamma, and the California Intercollegiate Press Assn.

Robison Takes Two

A total of 21 awards was made to representatives of 27 junior colleges, with El Camino students taking honors in five of the seven classifications. El Camino photographers swept the photo field, taking second place trophies in each of the three classifications offered. Bill Robison of Torrance was the recipient of trophies in the news and sports divisions, while Dick Mapes of Inglewood took a second in the feature bracket.

Miss Joyce Huffman, Lawndale, editor of the college newspaper, the Warhoop, was awarded third place for news writing, while K. Lyne O'Dell, commissioner of publications on the ECC campus, won third place honors for editorial writing. O'Dell is a graduate of Mira Costa High School and a resident of Manhattan Beach. The writing contests were conducted during convention sessions.

Alums of El Camino who won distinctions were Tom Cummings of Gardena, who is now a journalism student at Long Beach State College. Cummings won first place honors in editorial writing. Max Shapiro, editor of the Warhoop last year, represented San Jose State College and claimed the first place trophy for feature writing.

Active Lensmen

Robison, a graduate of Torrance High School, and Mapes, an alum of Morningside High in Inglewood, were both students of instructor Judd Grenier on the ECC campus last semester. Both were active as lensmen for their high school publications. Robison is staff photographer for both the Warhoop and the college yearbook, the Warrior. Mapes served in similar capacities last year.

Journalism Days

Warhoop representatives will attend annual Journalism Days at the University of Southern California and the University of Redlands during the coming week and on March 21 will sponsor their own Press Day, serving as hosts to 16 area high schools.

Leading news personalities who addressed the Fresno convention were Robert E. Eason, AP bureau chief in San Francisco; Max Roby, CBS newsman, and Dick Bibler, nationally syndicated college cartoonist, who is a member of the faculty of Monterey Peninsula College.
