And Lancers

... puts the heat on, they bring the stuff in through jugs. I love him so much more now that he's sober. Please, Ann, how can I keep him this way?—H.M.N.

Whisky fighters need constant encouragement. You can keep your husband on the wagon by bolstering his ego every day—telling him how much you love him, and letting him know how proud you are of the victory he's won.

Since AA saved him from the gutter, encourage him to attend meetings regularly. When he offers his hand to help a fallen brother (as he himself was helped) he gains strength and confidence for his own fight.

The man who refuses to take a drink is not "chicken." The real "chicken" is the one who needs the golden elixir to face the realities of everyday living.

Dear Ann: In your opinion, when people are guests in the home of a friend, do they or do they not have the right to expect the cats in the house to behave properly?

My husband and I called on friends last Sunday. I sat on the living room sofa. Their huge Angora cat pounced on my foot (he'd become fascinated by the tassel on my shoe) and commenced to piece it by nylon stocking to pieces! The hostess was naturally embarrassed and muttered a few words of apology as she pulled the cat off.

I waited for her to say something about replacing the hose, but her only comment was, "I'm terribly sorry. I hope the hose weren't expensive." She then added that the cat is usually very gentle and "perhaps I teased her."

Do you feel the hostess should have offered to replace the stockings or not—E.H. Eff.

Your hostess was not the meekest to say the least. She should have offered to replace the stockings. People are responsible for the damage done by their minor children and pets.

Are you getting too strict? You can benefit from the experience of thousands of mothers if you read ANN LANDERS' new booklet, "How to Live With Your Parents." It deals with your mother's needs in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope. Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. (C) 1958, Field Enterprises, Inc.
