

YMCA Plans Reading Test Here Today

The Torrance YMCA will conduct free reading tests for boys and girls today at 2080 Washington Ave. The "Y" will provide diagnostic testing and counseling in conjunction with the start of YMCA Reading Clubs this week. Parents are being urged to call the YMCA for an appointment with instructors from the Kendall Reading Center. Children from the second through the sixth grades will be accepted in classes limited to seven pupils each.

The YMCA-sponsored clubs are designed to teach phonics; increase speed and prevent regressions; and sharpen reading perception. A nominal fee is charged to cover the cost of materials and instruction.

The sooner children receive reading help the better chance they have to succeed. Being a poor reader is just as much a hardship as any physical disease, it is stated. Phone calls are welcome in order to schedule all children in need of reading aids. The YMCA phone number is FAirfax 8-1272.

Box Social Planned Monday by Civic Group

An old fashion box social will be held at the Carl Steele Cafeteria Monday evening, Nov. 2, under the sponsorship of the South West Park Civic Assn. The Carl Steele Belles will entertain, and a contest will be staged to pick the prettiest girl and the ugliest man, according to civic group officials.

Harvey Aluminum Package Wins Air Force Approval

A two-year development program in the container field has paid off for Harvey Aluminum. At the annual Air Materiel Command Packaging and Materials Handling Conference conducted recently at Oklahoma City, an aluminum container built by Harvey Aluminum won first place for the best USAF-industry developed package.

The container was jointly designed by Henry Roe, Weapons Transportation Division, San Bernardino Air Materiel Area; Milton Peterman, Rocketdyne Division, North American Aviation Co., Van Nuys, and Harvey Aluminum engineers.

USED BY THE Air Force to ship vernier rocket engines, the container is pressurized, shock-mounted, and stackable. The unit is constructed with integrally stiffened aluminum extruded skin panels, welded into cover and bottom assemblies. Modular design permits size variations in depth, width, and height.

Other significant operational advantages of the aluminum pack are light weight, exceptional rigidity, re-useability, high strength, maximum protection from environmental conditions, and ease of handling.

UNDER conventional fabricating methods, large containers are formed from built-up sheet metal or wooden sections and assembled with numerous small parts. The labor factor is costly, mass production is slow, longevity is limited, and weight is excessive. The award-winning container replaces five different heavy metal packages of various shapes and sizes.

"The purpose of our container program was to perfect an aluminum unit which would reduce manufacturing and handling costs and improve design efficiency," said a company engineering specialist. "Our current designs have checked out on all counts for shipping missile components, sensitive military equipment, and commercial products."

ONE MISSILE container under study by Harvey Aluminum is of monocoque design, utilizing heavy press cylindrical extrusions for the skin and thin-web press forgings for the bulkhead supports. This fabrication technique to improve the packaging of missiles enables the company to build aluminum containers in lengths up to 100 feet or more with diameters to accommodate the largest missile airframes.
