More than 5000 Cases of Mumps Reported in County This Year

By ROY O. GILBERT, M.D., County Health Officer

More than 5000 cases of mumps have been recorded in Los Angeles County so far this year, and this is almost 2000 more cases than occurred during last year for the same period.

Although mumps is not generally considered a serious communicable disease by the majority of people, the complications that may occur during the course of this illness can be serious. For that reason the attention of a physician is always considered essential as soon as mumps is suspected.

MUMPS MOST commonly occur between the ages of 5 and 15 but also can infect adults. And among those past puberty, it sometimes effects glands other than those in the neck and throat, particularly the sex glands. In grown-ups of either sex, though more often in the male, sterility may result as an aftermath of inflammation that involves the sex glands.

Signs of mumps generally include tenderness and swelling of one or more of the salivary glands. At first, one side of the area under the ear is affected and then, more often than not, the other side follows in a few days. Fever, fatigue, headache, and vomiting may be present.

THESE SYMPTOMS of illness usually appear in about 18 days after exposure to the infection. Sometimes they are noticeable a week or more before this time and sometimes not until about a week later.

THE SICK person is infectious to other individuals about 7 days before symptoms appear and remains so until the swelling subsides, which it usually does within a week. Glandular swelling does not occur in all cases. Even when this is absent, however, the mumps virus is present in the oral secretions and the individual may therefore transmit the infection to others.

MUMPS IS caused by the mumps virus. This virus is present in the saliva of an infected person and may be transmitted to others by means of droplet sprays that occur when the patient is talking, coughing, sneezing, and so forth. Or the infective agents may be spread through articles freshly soiled by saliva.

It is often thought that one attack of mumps confers lifelong immunity to the disease, but this is not entirely accurate. While one attack usually does confer considerable immunity, second attacks may and do occur and third attacks are sometimes reported.

THE CENTRAL nervous system may also become involved. Meningitis is not uncommon, as is encephalitis as a complication of mumps. When these conditions appear following an attack of mumps, the situation is more serious than in uncomplicated cases but the outlook for complete recovery is usually good.

Vaccines are available but are limited in usefulness, because the period of immunity that is conferred is quite brief—probably not exceeding two years. Still, when outbreaks of mumps occur in certain groups of young people, including the military, vaccination may be valuable.

CHILDREN are not generally vaccinated against the disease. By letting them get it at an early age, the hazard of mumps complications after adolescence is eliminated.

In any case of mumps the important thing to keep in mind is that good medical and nursing care are needed in order to prevent the serious complications that so often occur.

A pamphlet giving additional information on mumps will be mailed to anyone sending a card of request to the Division of Public Health Education, Los Angeles County Health Department, 241 North Figueroa St., Los Angeles 12.
